Church of the Wayfarer celebrates 75th year

By RON RUSSELL

THE HISTORY OF THE Church of the Wayfarer traces back to the outdoor meetings of a small group of Carmelites in 1902.

Before begetting Carmel's first Protestant church, Protestant Carmelites had to travel by horse and buggy—or walk—over the hill to the Methodist Campground in Pacific Grove, originally established as a unique summer campsite by the Methodist Episcopal Church.

In May 1904, the Rev. George Clifford, now retired, was appointed to form the First Methodist Episcopal Church in Carmel. For nearly half a year, the congregation met outdoors at the corner of what is now Dolores and Ocean. When it rained, the group found shelter in L.C. Horne's barn on San Carlos near Sixth.

J.F. Devendorf, one of the founders and city fathers of Carmel, who was also superintendent of the Carmel Development Company, originated the idea that a Protestant church should be built. Devendorf donated two lots on Lincoln Street between Ocean and Seventh avenues. After receiving additional donations totaling $700, the first church was able to open, debt free, on Nov. 4, 1904. It was christened the First Methodist Episcopal Church of Carmel.

A small white wooden building was constructed on the exact site where the present church stands. Its design hinted of Spanish influence. Sunday services, food sales, parties, stage productions and lectures all convened within the small one-room building.

IN 1925, THE FIRST addition to the structure was made. A space at the back of the chapel was added to accommodate Sunday school classes and to provide a large room for social activities. A small kitchen and pews were also added. In 1930, "The Manse," a dwelling for the minister, was obtained at Eleventh Avenue and Lincoln Street.

By 1939 the original church had been outgrown and had weakened with age; a new building was planned. Architect

A good deal for Carmel Woods, Hatton Fields

By AL EISNER

THE BIGGEST issue in next week's election will have a profound effect on the future of the city of Carmel, but the voters within the city limits won't have anything to say about it.

The question of whether the Carmel Woods and Hatton Fields areas should annex to the city will be decided by the 1,500 registered voters who reside within the two areas outside the city.

Annexation has always been an emotional issue in Carmel. There are plenty of people within the city limits who don't want the city to grow. They value the over-protective character of the city government and they want to protect the intimate character of the village. Things have gone pretty well, after all, so why invite trouble?

But, because the anti-annexation forces barely failed to muster enough votes to kill the annexation question, other voters will have to decide.

FOR THE PEOPLE who live in Hatton Fields and Carmel Woods, annexation is a good deal. While the sheriff's department has provided adequate police protection, there is little doubt that response time and particular attention to the needs of its citizens would improve if the area were served by the Carmel Police Department.

Fire protection has been excellent for the people living in Service Area No. 43, but would it be any worse with the Carmel Fire Department? I doubt it. Also, the cost of fire protection is included in the Carmel city property tax. Because of the exigencies of Proposition 13, there is little doubt that Service Area No. 43, which services the areas considering annexation, would have to impose a user fee to meet its budget deficit. This past year, the user fee was avoided because the district ate up most of its reserves.

In the past, annexation was a pocketbook issue. It was largely responsible for the defeat (twice) of moves to annex Carmel Point. The financial questions are moot, because Prop. 13 wiped out any advantages or disadvantages. So, the discussion should really center around which form of government can provide better services, and which form provides closer control of local government.

COUNTY GOVERNMENT is structured to service rural areas. Hatton Fields and Carmel Woods are very closely connected, spiritually and cultural to Carmel. Its problems are certainly much more closely related to Carmel than those of, say, King City or Greenfield. It really ought to be serviced by municipal government.

Most of the people living in the areas in question think of themselves as living in Carmel, but have no voice in city government. They are governed by the Board of Supervisors in Salinas. Whenever a land use question or variance is under discussion, weary concerned citizens have to make their way to Salinas. City Hall is a lot closer and a lot more accessible, too.

THE TOUGHEST QUESTION supporters of annexation must face is the quixotic nature of the city government. Led by the indefatigable Gunnar Norberg, the present City Council has provided a spectacle—sometimes amusing, but more often frustrating and silly—that has left the city paralyzed and divided. "Why should I vote to allow myself to be governed by Norberg?" they ask.

There are short-term and long-term answers to that question.

In the short-term, it seems pretty apparent that the voters within the city limits are beginning to feel they've had enough of the foolishness going on down at City Hall. It must be apparent to all but the most fanatic followers of Mr. Norberg and his slim majority on the council that the mandate they won in the election two years ago is disappearing fast.

It would be underestimating the intelligence and good sense of the residents of Carmel if you assumed that they are failing to catch the drift. So, I believe that there will be a significant shift in the next municipal election (it comes up in spring 1980) and that good sense will be restored to city government.

Carmel has been lucky in its 65 years of existence. It has found dedicated public servants who have served the city well. The current administration is really an aberration. It's a departure from the norm.

Previous city councils imposed a two-story height limitation on the village. They bought Carmel Beach. They steadfastly refused to join the rest of the world by accepting mail delivery and street addresses. Former city fathers adopted and observed tough zoning ordinances. The futile and divisive efforts of the current council are the exception, not the rule.

Further, voters in the two areas under consideration could elect new city councilmen who reside in these areas. There are lots of bright, talented, dedicated people who would be willing to serve, if called upon. They love Carmel as deeply as the people who reside within the city limits. A vote for annexation would be a vote for broadening the "brain pool" to bring in more potential candidates for the City Council, as well as hundreds of additional persons to serve voluntarily on the city's boards and commissions.

Carmel has frequently defied the rest of the world. Everyone connected with government agrees that developed areas near the cities should become part of those cities.

If the rules of common sense prevail, Hatton Fields and Carmel Woods will become part of Carmel after the election. If emotions are allowed to prevail, it is likely that the voters will choose to continue to be governed by the county.

(Al is on vacation. The preceding was written before he left late last month. He will return next week.)

Forgotten election

Dear Editor:

I hope people will not be so agitated about the annexation to Carmel issue that they forget or neglect the other, somewhat similar one—who gets elected to sit on the Carmel Sanitary District board for the next four years.

In or out of the village by the sea, we as residents of Carmel Woods, Hatton Fields/Mesa, we are members of that sanitary district, and the board is also facing a big and difficult annexation decision: whether and how much to annex in Carmel Valley.

The question is fraught with complex sub-issues, but the "bottom line" is that if the CSD fails to annex at least parts of the Valley, the supervisors will form a sanitation district to serve the many developments—mini-cities, condos, subdivisions that they have already approved in that area.

The supervisors would be in sole charge of such a district, with no local control. It would be a pity to see the residents of the Valley further saddled with another expensive and inexpert agency created to satisfy the development-oriented decisions of that board.

Charlotte Hurst and Ken McGinnis have served four years on the sanitary board, have learned the technical and sociological aspects of its decisions, are balanced and reasonable people with a great love of their community and the treasure we all enjoy here.

Ted Weller has already served two terms, and says frankly he is out of town on his business for five days a week (both McGinnis and Hurst are retired and devote many hours per day to the sanitary board's business, attending meetings, etc.). Weller currently has no local address nor telephone number.

Frank Bray, a new contender in the field, is an unknown quantity. A vote for two only for the three vacancies strengthens the support for those two.

A magical time

Dear Editor:

I recently returned to the Monterey Peninsula after a 10-year absence. I was born in Carmel, but spent much of my early childhood in the Valley. Part of that happy childhood was spent trekking across the Valley to the Tantamount Theater.

In those years I saw scores of silent and art house films, went to the puppet shows, and even participated in a play there (under the direction of Gene Perrine in his Little Lyric Theater). I feel I owe a great debt to Messrs. Martin, Geddes and Perrine.

Since leaving the Valley I have gone a long distance in terms of miles, living in Europe and South America, but I find myself quite close to that long ago time culturally. Recently I completed my master's work at Stanford University in communication, film production.

There is no doubt about the extent to which these men helped form my life. I remember vividly scenes from films shown there. When I read that the Tantamount had burned and then that it was fighting for rebirth, I felt a great sadness. To deprive the Valley of the Tantamount Theater is more than to deprive a few souls of a little entertainment; it deprives the whole of the Valley of a great stimulus. If not for themselves, I urge that the Valley people fight for the theater in the names of their children.

My climb to the Tantamount was a magical one, bringing me to stand (as Keats' Cortez) "with a wild surmise/Silent, upon a peak in Darien."

The world that these men opened to me has been a tremendously rewarding one. I hope that the privilege I enjoyed will not be denied future generations.

'Deserve our vote'

Dear Editor:

I attended the Carmel school board candidates' night at Middle School and was very impressed with four of the candidates.

Ken White, Barbara Sanford, Ron Parravano and Doyle Clayton addressed themselves well to the issues of our district. They are independent thinkers with creative and practical ideas. I believe they all deserve our votes on Nov. 6.

Gloria Stewart

Vote was 3-2

Dear Editor:

According to the sample election ballot, the City Council of Carmel adopted the ARgument Against Initiative Ordinance No. 77-22.

In the democratic process, the majority rules, however, the implication is misleading. It was adopted by a 3-2 vote.

Council members Helen Arnold and Howard Brunn strongly support the enactment of the city administrator ordinance, listed as Measure B on the Nov. 6 ballot.

Supports neighbor

Dear Editor:

When you live directly across the street from someone for a number of years and have contact with them as a "neighbor" I believe you get to know them in a special sort of way.

Over the years I have observed the time, talent, patience and determination Ken White has put forth in his everyday life, work and with his family. I feel these same efforts and qualities would be set forth by Ken White serving as an elected member of the Carmel Unified School District board during these next four very crucial years in the district.

Trustees praised

Dear Editor:

A giant step forward was taken at the Sept. 25th meeting of the Carmel Unified School District board. Board items concerning the education of the students will hereafter be taken up at the beginning of the agenda when eyes are bright and heads clear, thus saying to this community that education of the students is most important. For all of us who have endured marathon late meetings, whose numbers dwindle as each hour passed, and topics of major importance arriving for discussion or action past 10 o'clock, we applaud Chairman Neill's decision.

We also say thank you for the great improvement in curriculum, particularly in the language arts fields, through the continuing, untiring efforts of one board member, Betty Bell. Parents and teachers alike now know the expectations in these learning areas for the students.

Betty Bell has accomplished more in one four-year term than most members do in two or three terms because her goal was setting the education of the students as the number one priority for the district. She has never lost sight of this goal. This entire community owes thanks and gratitude to Betty Bell and Clayton Neill for putting the education of the students first. They will be sorely missed on the Carmel school board.

Barbara B. Sanford
Carmel

Clayton supporter

Dear Editor:

Doyle Clayton is a candidate for the two-year term on the Carmel school board.

He is a life-time resident of Carmel. His two children attend Carmel schools.

Doyle attended school in Carmel and would like to see the quality of education he received here be continued for his children and all students in the Carmel district.

Doyle teaches at the high school level and is daily involved with students and knows their needs. Because he is a teacher and because of his close contact with the students he will be a valuable asset to our school board.

Vote for Doyle Clayton.

Phyllis Dufur

Sanford endorsed

Dear Editor:

The Carmel Unified School District will be facing a number of new and difficult problems in the next four years and it will require a school board that is strong, and one that is determined to establish and maintain a high quality of education for all of its students.

Barbara Sanford has worked for 21 years in a wide variety of volunteer positions in the CUSD, And she has come to know the district as well as anyone can. I have been impressed, many times, with Barbara's ability to dig into problems that impede the educational process, and to come up with solutions—often after everyone else has given up.

A school board that includes Barbara Sanford's dedication, intelligence and energy will be equal to the challenges that it must meet. I hope that you will join me in voting for Barbara on Nov. 6.

Maureen Girard

Parravano backed

Dear Editor:

Ron Parravano is an energetic young attorney from the Carmel Woods area.

He is a candidate for the CUSD board. His two children attend Woods School where he has been actively involved. Recently he was co-chairman of the Budget Advisory Committee of CUSD and will use this experience to make the best use of the educational dollar.

Vote with confidence for Ron Parravano on Nov. 6 for the CUSD board.

'Ken is a doer'

Dear Editor:

I want to give my endorsement to Ken White as candidate for member of the board of the Carmel Unified School District. I also wish to express my appreciation for his interest in the community and his willingness to serve on the board.

Ken is a doer and not a talker. He has supported our community in many ways over the 20 years he has lived in Carmel.

The following are activities in which he has worked. For three years he coached youth baseball and then served as president of its board. He instituted the recent youth soccer program in connection with the YMCA in Carmel and Carmel Valley. This successful program has involved over 200 youths and parents. This ambitious program demonstrates his ability as an organizer and leader. He served on the board of directors of the Carmel Chapter of Red Cross and served as a volunteer fireman for the Carmel Highlands Fire Department. These activities demonstrate his concern and sensitivity to his community.

Most important, however, is Ken's job as athletic director at Monterey High School. His administrative background in the teaching and coaching field is one of his biggest assets and qualifies him for serving as a member of the Carmel Unified School District board.

A recent article in the Pine Cone reported Mr. White's job description incorrectly when they stated that he is only a teacher. Ken White is, in fact, an administrator and directs the athletic programs for Monterey High School.

Favors McGinnis

Dear Editor:

A vote for Ken McGinnis, incumbent, for the Carmel Sanitary District, is a vote for experience, commitment and balance.

Ken has the advantage of years of experience in the field of conservation; he is a former head of the Carmel Sanitary District.

As a member of the single most-important group which will decide the future of our area, he has the knowledge, the focus and the dimensions necessary to carry out this heavy commitment.

'We need all 4!'

Dear Editor:

There are four superior candidates for the Carmel school board, Barbara Sanford, Ken White, Doyle Clayton and Ron Parravano.

Each is well-qualified, has integrity, and will be responsive to this community. Citizens will be welcome at board meetings. The board will want to know your concerns.

A vote for these four will ensure that education for the students of Carmel Unified School District will be the board's primary concern.

We need all four!

'Qualified for job'

Dear Editor:

Doyle Clayton and Ken White have announced candidacy for the Carmel school board. Both are highly qualified individuals, with backgrounds as teachers and coaches; both wish to improve communication between the Carmel unified schools and the community; both are committed to focusing attention upon improvement of curriculum. Both are parents with children in Carmel schools. Remember their names.

'Deserve re-election'

Dear Editor:

During the past several years the Carmel Sanitary District has faced many problems caused by population growth in the area, requirements for a higher level of treatment and the agreement to provide wastewater treatment for the Pebble Beach Sanitary District.

As a former board member, I know that much of the credit for the district's ability to meet these challenges must be attributed to Charlotte Hurst and Kenneth McGinnis, who are seeking re-election.

Each provided strong leadership as president of the board during a period when planning for the future became the most important issue.

I strongly support Hurst and McGinnis for re-election. They are dedicated, well-informed, farsighted, experienced and innovative—important qualifications for meeting the challenges of the future.

'Vote yes on B'

Dear Editor:

A "yes" vote on City Proposition B in the upcoming Nov. 6 election will assure Carmelites, old and new, the kind of rational administrative stability our remarkable community deserves.

By voting yes on B, Carmel residents will be confirming an existing ordinance which, in my view, is an entirely proper and valid one enacted by our City Council in 1977. Attempts by the present City Council to tamper with this ordinance resulted in the broadly supported initiative petition which, in turn, has given Carmel voters an opportunity to express themselves on this matter.

A majority yes on B vote will make it legally impossible for the City Council to water down and thus negate this important ordinance. It is too late to save for ourselves the former city administrator, Jack Collins, but it is not too late to provide the acting administrator and his successors with the appropriate tools to do their job.

To prevent return to the "Government by Whim" of an earlier day, be sure that you vote yes on proposition B in the city of Carmel-by-the-Sea portion of the Nov. 6 ballot.

Gene Hammond,
Carmel-by-the-Sea.

Rebirth possible

Dear Editor:

Over and above the positive dollar advantage for Hatton Fields and Carmel Woods in annexing to Carmel, there can be the rebirth of spiritual, cultural and community oneness.

Not only saving you money in the future (Prop. 13 favors you in annexation!), you won't lose in necessary services one whit!

As a worshipper, do you attend one of the many churches in Carmel? Do you enjoy and benefit from the many social, cultural, entertainment, or educational advantages found here in Carmel?

There are, in addition to Sunset Center, the Carmel Art Association Gallery, the Forest Theater, the Carmel Woman's Club, the Carmel Foundation and more—all living in Carmel.

Do you get your mail at the post office in the village? Do you avail yourself of the library, generously founded by a Carmel citizen for the entire community?

Please consider that you will have an active vote equal approximately to one-half the present registered Carmel city vote. Thereby you will have a powerful impact not only at City Hall. You will gain power at the county seat in Salinas.

Please remember that Carmel city dollars in the past provided Sunset Center and the Forest Theaer, and saved some of our beach area. The city also contributed heavily to OLAF for purchase of the western Odello artichoke fields to forestall commercial development there, and gave financial support to saving the landmark Robinson Jeffers Tor House.

Now we, the people of Carmel-by-the-Sea, welcome you with open arms and with love.

Users fee for city?

Dear Editor:

A lot has been written about a possible users fee starting next year in CSA 43.

What about the possibility of a users fee in Carmel?

In the city administrator's report to LAFCO, it stated that in the event of annexation, the city proposes to add one additional building inspector and car; five additional policemen and one patrol car; three additional firemen; one street sweeper and operator; and one additional tree crew of four people and equipment.

The cost of these additions would have to be paid for by all of Carmel. This is why the majority of Carmelites are against annexation.

Suppose that the residents of Carmel insist that the City Council impose users fees in Carmel Woods and Hatton Fields to pay these costs?

Vote against annexation Nov. 6.

Amazed

Dear Editor:

When I received my sample ballot a few days ago, I was amazed to find Measure C, a measure to advise the City Council as to whether or not the city of Carmel should purchase the property on which the Piccadilly Nursery was located.

I was even more amazed when I read the argument for the measure signed by Jean B. Mitchell. This argument states that the owners of the property are willing to sell to the city. I know that the owners have already refused two offers by the city and that the only way they will turn over the property to the city is if it is condemned under the provisions of eminent domain.

The owners tell me that they have a lease agreement with Stefano Cacace, the nursery man who is now subleasing from the city, for a period of 10 years, beginning Aug. 1, 1980, after his sublease with the city expires.

As I see it, this will ensure that the property will remain used as a nursery until July 31, 1989. During this time the owners will be paying property taxes, the nursery business sales tax, and the same open space as was there in the past will remain as open space.

I do not want my tax money squandered by the city for a park which will provide no more open space than now exists. Our city has enough problems without trying to compete with legitimate private business.

Can't vote, but...

Dear Editor:

We residents of the outlying territory of County Service Area 43 do not, of course, have a vote on the annexation of Hatton Fields and Carmel Woods to Carmel-by-the-Sea—but we have a big stake in that controversial proposal.

If the annexation should succeed, our fire protection district, CSA 43, would lose those notable areas from its district, with serious adverse effect on the people and the property in what would remain in the district—many fine people, valuable property.

Past taxes from all of us throughout the present district have kept the district going after the calamity of Proposition 13. What we all paid to build up a modern professional protection service resulted in the present favorable fire insurance rating. Many residents and organizations in the present district area contributed about $27,000 for furnishings for the fine fire house on Rio Road.

CSA 43, which renders many important services besides extinguishing fires, is staffed adequately and completely by trained professionals. Carmel-by-the-Sea has volunteers and some paid personnel in its fire department; to what extent can one count on the presence of volunteers when needed? That "Carmel" ambulance doesn't come from the city but from the Red Cross and it serves throughout CSA 43's district; some of us in the outlying territory contributed for the ambulance.

In my opinion, some of the arguments of annexation proponents are, to say the least, misleading. Besides, one wonders why anyone would want to be annexed to a town of peculiar government and double-parked trucks. I hope and trust that the annexation will fail.

Facts not aired

Dear Editor:

Voters in Hatton Fields and Carmel Woods will vote November 6th on a multi-faceted issue. I refer to annexation.

To date voters are being asked to make their decision based on emotional considerations, but I don't believe the facts have been aired.

Do voters in the area of annexation know how they will receive fire service? Are they aware they don't avoid service fees by coming in? Do they realize the city will be hard pressed to provide its present level of services to the total area? Are they prepared for changes in their zoning? Do they know city reserve funds were not designed to meet the needs of annexed lands? Do they know long-term planning by post office authorities will have to be re-evaluated? Do they realize funding of library services will have to be re-evaluated? Are they aware that annexation plans are being postponed or canceled altogether in other communities?

There is no question in my mind that the people voting on the question would be welcome if they chose to become incorporated with the city.

I wrote this letter because of my concern that the problems associated with annexation will be addressed by both the city and the county only after the annexation. If annexation is turned down, then let's put the horse in front of the cart and discuss all the ramifications of annexation. Putting before the voters the facts avoids surprises.

Provides 8.8 percent wage increase

Council approves agreement with city employees

AN AGREEMENT with three city employee groups involving salaries and fringe benefits was approved unanimously by the City Council at its special meeting last week.

The three groups representing 80 city workers, are the Carmel Police Department Employees Association, the City of Carmel Employees Association and the City of Carmel Management Personnel Association.

Included in the "memorandum of understanding" agreement is an 8.8 percent cost-of-living wage increase retroactive to July 1, 1979. The 8.8 percent increase was built into the salary schedule approved by the council during its budget sessions last August.

The increase is in accord with a three-year agreement approved last year between the council and city employees which provides for a yearly cost-of-living adjustment based on the Consumer Price Index from April to April for the San Francisco-Oakland area.

The agreement also provides for a high-and-low adjustment. Should the cost-of-living exceed 10 percent, employees would only receive the maximum of 10 percent. Should it fall below 5 percent, they would receive the minimum of 5 percent. The agreement expires at the end of the 1980-81 fiscal year.

ALSO INCLUDED in the pack are salary step increases for employees based on date of employment anniversaries and "if merited by job performance." The increases terminate when the top step is reached.

The council also agreed that "an employee who leaves city employment after five years of honorable service shall receive payment for 25 percent of the unused cumulative sick leave at his rate of pay at the time of termination." This does not include employees terminated by the city.

In its agreement with the police association, which also represents non-management fire department personnel, the council approved several clauses involving physical examinations, residency requirements, uniform allowance and overtime pay.

The council agreed with the police association that "the city shall pay up to $90, plus the cost of an electrocardiogram not to exceed $28, for annual physical examinations for each employee over the age of 40."

The council stipulated that "safety employees shall be required to reside within a distance from the station not to exceed 20 minutes driving time from their residence to the station."

The council agreed that the city "shall continue to pay a minimum of two hours of overtime on the basis of one and one-half times the employee's hourly rate for court appearances and calls back in addition to the normal work week. Any time in excess of two hours shall be paid to the next highest hour."

The uniform allowance for all uniformed personnel in the police department was increased to $35 per month.

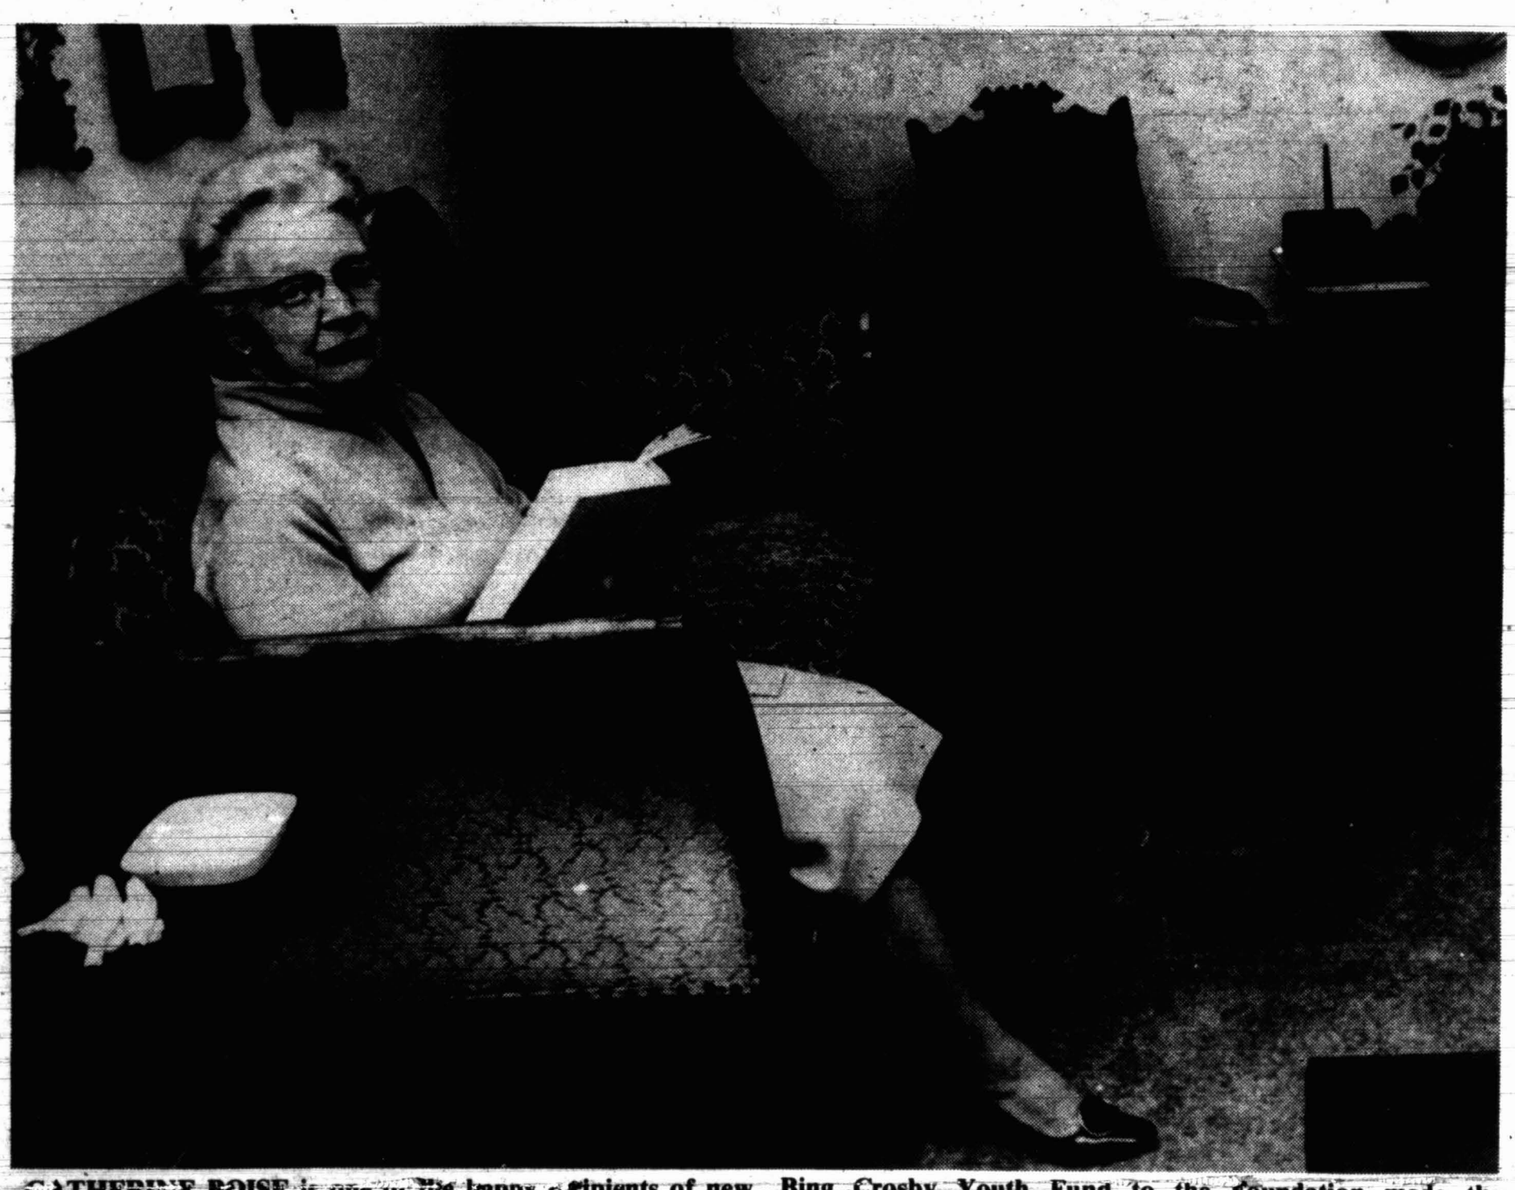
THE AGREEMENT with the management personnel association also provides for physical examination benefits. It stipulates that "the city shall pay up to $100, plus the cost of an electrocardiogram not to exceed $30, for an annual physical examination for each management person over the age of 45."

Management personnel "will also be provided with life insurance in the face amount of $10,000 in excess of that to which they are entitled with all other employees."

The council also agreed that "all management personnel are entitled to reimbursement for educational costs for courses or programs which will lead to improved performance of job responsibilities."

Each management employee will also receive five days of annual executive leave, in addition to annual vacations.

Gift helps improve CF housing units



CATHERINE BOISE is one of the happy recipients of new carpeting and linoleum in her apartment on Revvette Court, one of 21 senior citizen housing units in Carmel maintained by the Carmel Foundation. A recent $1,000 donation from the Bing Crosby Youth Fund to the Foundation made the purchase and installation possible, according to Maryalice Jones, office manager of the Carmel Foundation.

More mosquitoes than usual invade Carmel

There are more mosquitoes in the Carmel area this year than usual and this is of concern to the county Health Department. So stated Walter Wong, director of environmental health for Monterey County this week in a telephone interview.

"We've had quite a few complaints," Wong stated, "especially from Carmel Point; but all we can do is check them out."

The problem, according to Wong, is that the county lacks personnel to do follow-up work and an in-depth analysis of the situation.

Before Prop. 13, there was a county-wide vector control officer monitoring the mosquito, fly and rodent populations, with sufficient staff to make routine checks. The vector control position was eliminated in Prop. 13 cutbacks and the county was forced to rely more on the state Health Department.

To compound the problem, however, the state Health Department was cut back 60 percent, which severely restricted its ability to assist the county. For example, state workers did come and pump out a pond near Carmel River Beach, but it has apparently refilled and they are unable to return.

Wong said he is especially concerned about the situation in Carmel Valley, because the animal population is high in that area and mosquitoes are carriers of encephalitis or "sleeping sickness." An epidemic of this often-fatal disease occurred in the Valley about 10 years ago.

"Last year, the Grand Jury recommended restoration of the county vector control person," Wong stated. "However, this has not been done."

Asked what action could be taken to carry out the recommendation, Wong said that he would have to apply for the position again this year. In the meantime, his department does the best it can to respond to the growing number of complaints.

City storage yard proposal before county again

A STORAGE YARD proposed by the city of Carmel will be considered by the Monterey County Planning Commission at its meeting, Wednesday, Nov. 14.

Commissioners are scheduled to discuss the long-standing issue of a proposed storage yard on the Max Hodges property behind Carmel Mission at 10:25 a.m. The commission will re-open the public hearing that was continued from Aug. 8.

Acting City Administrator Doug Peterson requested the continuation of the hearing so he could discuss with neighbors their concerns about truck traffic.

Residents of the unincorporated area just south of the city limits oppose the plan because they claim it would increase truck traffic in their neighborhood and allow Commissioners were primarily concerned with the non-conforming status of the land use. Hodges, a landscaper, had used the property for storage and planting activity for several years, despite the fact it was zoned for residential use in 1941.

THERE WAS DOUBT raised whether Hodges has the legal right to lease the property to the city because of the non-conforming status. The coastal commissioners were not satisfied that the questions could be answered until the city and county reached a formal agreement.

Peterson asked for the continuance in August because of repeated fears from residents that large city trucks would drive through the neighborhood when school dumping of Carmel's "gutter sweepings" behind the famous Carmel Mission.

THE MAX HODGES property is located at Lasuen and Dolores, directly behind the mission. Since last November the city has paid $500 per month rent on a 60-month lease for the Hodges property with the hope of converting it into a corporation yard.

At a hearing last March, the Central Regional Coastal Commission directed the city to file for a use permit from the county. Before it would grant a coastal permit, the commission wanted the city to resolve questions about traffic congestion and the non-conforming status of a storage yard on the site.

children are present. There was also dispute over whether access into the Hodges' property was adequate for trucks.

Concerning the proximity of the storage yard to the Carmel Mission, Dan Daly, a consistent opponent of the plan, told the commissioners on Aug. 8 that it was a "dump" which the city intended and it had no place near the church.

Commissioner Gary Varga stated that the issue is whether the storage yard would be a further expansion of a non-conforming use.

Possible annexation of the site is being considered by the Carmel City Council. The city staff has been instructed to study the feasibility of annexing the property to Carmel.

A letter from East Berlin

'Everywhere there are reminders of the war'

(Although Al fulfilled his editorial duties by writing three columns before he left for Europe, we thought readers might enjoy excerpts from a recent letter.)

East Berlin is quite an experience. It is like a city risen from the ashes—but without taste and without regard for human scale. The overwhelming impression is that of a beehive ... everybody is working (there is a labor shortage—foreign firms built hotels, trade centers, meeting halls) and there is a sense of purpose.

Imagine driving along Karl Marx Dam, the first street to be rebuilt after the war in East Berlin, and realizing that all the buildings were rebuilt with the same bricks and stones used before they were destroyed. East Germany is not poor—the fifth or sixth largest industrial power in the world—but they are working hard.

Everywhere there are reminders of the war ... the buildings that were not totally destroyed are being restored ... bullet holes, blackened ruins—relics of the heroic war against Fascism. We visited the Soviet War Memorial in honor of the 22,000 Russian soldiers who died "liberating" Berlin (there are 5,000 buried at the Memorial) ... a very impressive monument/park area.

Scott MacClelland said to our guide: "A very impressive memorial ... do you like the Russians?" The guide shrugged her shoulders and said something like "Ehgh?" She then said, "Do the West Berliners like the Americans?" Amazing that she should equate the two nations.

Museums here are pathetic (although they are very proud of them). One room at the National Gallery in West Berlin has more treasures than in all the museums put together in East Berlin.

Weather has been generally lousy ... cloudy, showers with temperatures 45-55 and sometimes windy. Thank goodness for my hat and sweater!

Saw an excellent performance of Puccini one-act operas in West Berlin, including Gianni Schicci, done by Hidden Valley last year. The opera house, on the main drag in West Berlin, is in a very unimposing building. A sterile structure inside, too.

This (the Palasthotel) is the newest hotel in East Berlin ... competes with the Hyatt on Union Square. I'm sure they are trying to impress us.

Our guide was born in Rostock in North Germany, and is a somewhat attractive woman who studied mathematics, but works as a guide for the government because that is what they chose for her. She could not refuse.

We lunched in the banquet room of another large hotel and were fed institutionally—terrible Calf Rouladen, reconstituted potatoes, NO butter for your bread (none available), no coffee available (too expensive, costs them too much in exchange dollars), cheap beer and bad red cabbage, plus awful lemonade (one of our group thought it was Kool Aid).

A group of Russian tourists squatted at the tables next to ours in this huge hall. The leader, a squat Bulgarian lady, was very upset because one or two coats belonging to people in our group were on a chair at one of her tables. We avoided an international incident by removing the coats ....

Pigs in clover

By the Rev. LARRY FARRELL
The Oct. 17 invocation delivered to the Carmel Rotary Club

We find strange things in strange places. Early this month in an ancient rectory on the southeastern shore of Newfoundland settled by Lord Baltimore in the 17th century, I found a library of old books and to my surprise a collection of sermons of a Baptist preacher, Charles Hadden Sprugeon, a Billy Graham of his time. From 1834 to 1892, thousands flocked to hear his emotional appeal. But, very unlike most Puritan Divines, he enlivened his sermons with spontaneous examples full of unconventional and earthy humor.

In Plain Advice to Plain People, he said that "some of my parishioners are like my neighbors' pigs, all grunt and no bacon."

O Lord, help us to stop our gruntings and begig to deliver the bacon in our home life, our church life, in Rotary and in our other community activities. Help us to be more compassionate, considerate, thoughtful and helpful.

If we stop the grunting and start delivering the goods, the shock may prove fatal to our family and friends. But they will perish with a smile as they gaze at us pigs in clover.

A letter to Ben...

Some thoughts on city measures

Dear Ben:

FROM "THE OTHER Side of the Grapestake Fence," my views on two far-raching ballot measures to be addressed in the November election.

First, that old bugaboo annexation has again come back to haunt us. LAFCO, (Local Agency Formation Commission) in the most high-handed and arrogant manner has virtually forced this farce on us.

The way it was done is not bad enough, those popinjays in their infinite (??) wisdom proclaimed that we, the residents of Carmel have not one word to say in the matter—this is democracy?

Brings to mind something I read not long ago, "Nature gave man two ends—one to sit on, one to think with. Ever since then man's success or failure has been dependent on the one he used most."

There is no doubt in my mind which end Michael Johnson and friends used in making the aforementioned decision. So be it, 'tis now water over the dam and like it or not the voters of Hatton Fields and Carmel Woods hold our future in their hands.

I do not rest easy with the arguments that the promoters of annexation are touting, nor do I rest easy with the members of the committee itself, each and every one of whom have visions of an elected (or appointed) office dancing in their heads. The Monday morning quarterbacking of our present City Council is unreasonable and unconscionable, especially in the light of the fact they do not attend council meetings, gleaning their facts second hand and not caring enough to be in attendance. Unforgivable.

IN A REPORT to Michael Johnson, executive officer of LAFCO, from the city administrator dated Sept. 18, 1978, I submit the following information:

"The Planning Department will not have a significant increase in work load since most of the day-to-day work involves the commercial districts. Revision of the General Plan will be a greater undertaking. Difficult questions will rise regarding the length of time county zoning and building regulations will apply. The issues of General Plan and transitional zoning, while very time consuming for staff and planning commissioners, will involve only modest additional city cost.

"Building inspection will have to be increased. In order to provide residential inspections for new construction and reports when residential property changes ownership, an additional inspector and car will be required."

Page 3—Streets and Shop

"The area presents some significant problems that need to be resolved by the county before the city becomes fully responsible. Additional right-of-way must be acquired for some of the narrow streets, drainage provisions should be made where significant erosion has been permitted and the streets should be striped and otherwise brought up to city standards."

"City street sweeping provides once-a-month service in the residential district. The city will either add a sweeper and operate and maintain this level of service or reduce the frequency in both old and 'new' city to once every two months.

"City library services have been available to residents of these areas because of a county financial contribution through a contract. The value of that contract for 1978-79 is still unknown and will be substantially reduced if the area is annexed."

AS YOU CAN plainly see there is much more to this annexation question than meets the eye. And as if that weren't enough—in the September 1979 issue of Western City (the official California League magazine) an article dealing with the impact of Proposition 13 on Page 21 reads as follows:

"Annexation plans are being postponed or canceled altogether. For example, the city of Modesto, prior to Prop. 13, was competing with a neighboring community to annex a heavy industrial area south of the city. Now, with the uncertainties of property tax, neither city wants to annex the area. Similarly, Petaluma has dropped annexation plans for a 10,000-resident area because of a possible negative cost-revenue impact on the city."

Just a little food for thought folks — annexation at this moment in time is premature, unwise and would most certainly have a resounding negative backlash on everyone concerned.

NOW AND FINALLY, Measure B, Ordinance 77-22, dealing with the powers of the city administrator. This issue has been blown up way out of proportion. Quite simply the facts are: this ordinance was indeed passed two years ago by a unanimous vote of the City Council. But on a trial basis. The idea was new, untried and after a suitable length of time was to be re-evaluated to determine its workability.

Re-evaluation time came, the majority of the council felt the powers given the city administrator had been abused and misused. (Apparently hundreds of residents felt the same way, judging by the number of irate phone calls received by the mayor.)

Their decision was not politically motivated. There were no personal vendettas. They had the facts in hand and after many agonizing hours of soul searching they made their decision. But, because two of their fellow council members disagreed facts became distorted and issues clouded. These two tore to shreds any hope that our City Council could work with continuity or plausibility.

What happened was unfortunate, what the two minority council members did was (and is) unforgivable.

But that too is water over the dam.

I ask only that you study the full text of Measure B on page 27-37 of your sample ballot and read carefully the Impartial Analysis (written by our city attorney) on page 27-38.

County Service Area No.43 residents may pay user fees

By STEVE HELLMAN

RESIDENTS OF COUNTY Service Area (CSA) No. 43, which includes Carmel Woods and Hatton Fields, were warned last week that they will pay user fees beginning next year.

Monterey County service officials told the Board of Supervisors at its meeting Oct. 23 that user fees are necessary in the service districts throughout the county because of declining fiscal reserves.

Without the user fees, explained County Fire Marshal Tom Perkins, fire protection districts like CSA No. 43 will have to severely trim services. In other cases, an entire fire district might be consolidated with other districts, he declared.

Perkins said that if the residents of CSA 43 want to maintain their Class Four fire insurance rating, they will have to accept user fees. These yearly fees could be as high as $100 per home, he said, or as low as $10 per home.

Residents of Carmel Woods and Hatton Fields can avoid the fees if they decide at the ballot box Nov. 6 to annex to the city of Carmel. But this would mean their neighborhoods would drop from the Class Four fire rating in CSA 43 to a Class Five rating in Carmel.

Perkins noted that Carmel's Class Five could slip to a lower classification.

THE SUPERVISORS approved last week the allocation of $1.58 million from what is known as the District Augmentation Fund to "bail-out" the service districts for fiscal year 1979-80. This fell far short of the $3.34 million that was requested by the more than 40 special service districts.

Several districts like the Monterey Peninsula Regional Park and Open Space District were not allocated supplemental funds despite their requests. Although the fire protection districts were given top priority in the allocation, the county could provide only $1.29 million of the $2.38 million requested by the 16 fire districts.

CSA 43 requested $335,000 and received $66,000. Carmel Valley Fire District asked for $260,000 and was granted $202,000. Asking for $182,000, Mid-Valley received $162,000. Carmel Highlands got $28,000, or about half of its request. And the County Service Area 39 (Aguajito area) request for $20,000 was rejected.

MIKE JOHNSON, EXECUTIVE director of the county Local Agency Formation Committee, recommended the allocations. He explained that they were based on the available reserves in each district. Supplemental funds were not recommended for districts like CSA 39 because they have the reserves to maintain "current levels of service," he said.

"These districts can fully fund their 1979-80 budgets with existing revenue and still have the required 5 percent or $50,000 reserves at year-end," Johnson told the supervisors.

The allocation for CSA 43 fell $300,000 short of its request, Johnson said, because the district has that amount of extra reserves to continue operating. But, he noted, "This is the last year that reserves of significant size will remain for the fire districts. Next fiscal year the reserves will not be there and the augmentation fund will only be able to fund 50 percent of the anticipated requests."

The drain on reserves that has occurred since passage of Proposition 13, Johnson declared, "will necessitate the imposition of service fees by the fire districts or significant cutbacks in their services."

PERKINS ECHOED Johnson's prediction, saying that fire districts will be "forced out of existence" unless user fees are implemented. He said that residents within CSA 43 can expect the question of user fees to be on the ballot next March or April.

Rod Holmgren, a resident of Hatton Fields, questioned whether the supervisors should approve the $66,000 allocation for CSA No. 43. He said that the district is in a "golden era of growth" because of the expansion of the Carmel Rancho Shopping Center, and its tax base is going to rise accordingly.

CSA 43 includes the unincorporated areas of Hatton Fields, Carmel Woods and Mission Fields. It takes in the High Meadow and Outlook Drive subdivisions. Carmel Rancho Shopping Center, Carmel Center and the floor of Carmel Valley east to and including the hillside subdivision of Del Mesa Carmel are within the district.

CSA 43 is served by the main fire station at Rio Road, which is staffed by 18 full-time firemen with one battalion chief and a training officer. The district is also served in part by the State Forestry Division fire station on Carmel Hill next to Community Hospital. A staff of 12 firemen at Carmel Hill station are paid out of the CSA 43 coffers, according to Perkins.

HOLMGREN NOTED THAT the board of directors of CSA 43 is proposing an 18½ percent budget increase this year, while the adjoining CSA 39 and CSA 42 are planning budget reductions.

He said, "The district (CSA 43) has so much left in reserves that it can draw almost $300,000 and still have enough left to meet the county's formula of a $50,000 reserve.

"No wonder District 43 is called the 'Cadillac' of fire districts. Their payroll apparently includes personnel to empty the ashtrays. I think perhaps 'Rolls Royce' would be a better term," Holmgren charged.

Charley McCulloch of Carmel Valley defended the allocation for CSA 43. A member of the CSA 43 advisory committee, he said, "I want to correct the impression that CSA 43 is the source of unending funds. We will have no reserves by the end of this year.

"Sure, we enjoy the best rating in the county, but a further reduction is going to jeopardize our Class Four rating," he said. For the same reason, he said that residents in CSA 43 are opposed to the annexation of Carmel Woods and Hatton Fields to Carmel. It would "sharply reduce" the tax base, he contended.

PERKINS AGREED: "CSA 43 is an excellent fire district." He said that prior to Proposition 13, it was the only other fire district in the county (along with the city of Salinas) that had a Class Three rating.

He noted, however, that a great disparity exists between fire districts. CSA 39 is able to continue operating without county bail-out funds, Perkins said, because it is staffed completely by volunteers.

The county should push for consolidation of fire districts to avoid the disparity of "Cadillac" and "rag-tag departments," Supervisor Ken Blohm said.

Supervisor Sam Farr said, "It's been clarified that Colonel St.E.P. (Step) Tyner (CSA 43 advisory committee member) has built a Cadillac."

Farr said that Proposition 13 eliminated the option for residents to maintain excellent services by raising their property taxes.

Fees for service are the only alternative, and they are certain to come up next year for CSA 43, he said. "When it comes down to it, the level of services will be what the people are willing to pay," Farr said.

Church of the Wayfarer celebrates 75th anniversary

Robert L. Stanton was commissioned to create a new design.

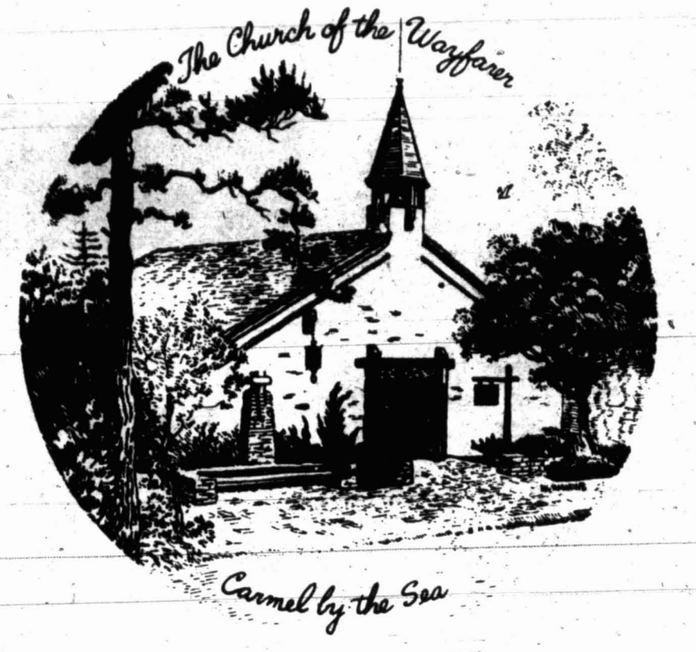
Eschewing traditional motifs, he envisioned an exclusive style that belonged to no architectural period, but instead would embody a Carmel style. The same front elevation survives today. Brick walls and terraces, a provincial bell tower, rough plaster walls and an antique tiled roof created a note of rural simplicity.

It was intended that the chapel interior give a feeling of peace and beauty. The paneling is walnut wainscoting of the Italian 18th century. Originally in the Castle of Nerni which belonged to the princes of Bourbon, the paneling had been taken to Villa Monapisana near Lucca, Italy, where it was sold at auction by these same princes.

The steeple, the first in Carmel, housed "The Bell," which had been presented when the first church was built by an anonymous group known as "The Villagers." It is still in use and in earlier days served Carmel for fire and emergency calls.

The first service in this new building was presented on March 3, 1940.

In the same year, the name "Church of the Wayfarer" was adopted by the membership, but it took nine years to make it legal in the articles of incorporation. The carved redwood sign "The Church of the Wayfarer," which now stands to the right of the front door, was made and installed in 1948.



The Church of the Wayfarer is entwined in the history of Carmel. As the second oldest church in the city, its buildings, ministers and benevolent programs have always been important to Carmel's citizens.

Aesthetically, the church and garden have pleased thousands of visitors and Carmelites. Inspirationally, its ministers have tended to the spiritual and physical needs of the community. Through marriage or funeral, through celebration or fellowship, the Church of the Wayfarer has touched the lives of Carmelites for the past 75 years.

On Sunday, Nov. 4, Carmel's Church of the Wayfarer will celebrate its 75th anniversary. To commemorate the Diamond Jubilee, which was opened by the present minister, Dr. Paul Woudenberg, a special calendar of events began on Sunday, Jan. 7, 1979 and will culminate on Nov. 4.

Through the year, Sunday services have been marked by special events, guest speakers and films, as well as services in honor of people who have assisted the church over the past years. On Nov. 4, the church will serve a complimentary brunch to all parishioners.

The Carmel Pine Cone is pleased to salute the Church of the Wayfarer in honor of its Diamond Jubilee.

TWO ADDITIONAL LOTS on Lincoln Street and Seventh Avenue were purchased for $40,000 in 1949. A small house on one of these became known as "Wayfarer House" and was used for meetings and some Sunday school classes until all the original buildings were razed.

In 1950 a campaign for funds was organized and $80,000 was raised by subscriptions and donations. Two years later, work began on the two-story Youth Building which was dedicated in September 1952. This building included a modern kitchen and a large Fellowship Hall for social gatherings and entertainment, as well as rooms for additional Sunday school classes and the education office.

In spite of this expansion, space once more became a problem. Even with two morning services, the chapel seating capacity of 120 could not accommodate the membership of 450. To remedy the situation, William Concolino, a member of the church, and George Willets, were called on to begin design of the present structure.

The altar was completely removed and the building was extended to the back of the lot. A choir loft with space for a pipe organ was built into the rear. Luckily, there was enough of the walnut paneling stored in the attic to complete the newly lengthened walls. The expanded chapel now seated 204 and became known as the sanctuary. The extended building was connected to the Youth Building and the two became one with the addition of a pastor's study, library and secretary's office.

The "Little Chapel" with walnut paneling to match that used in the new sanctuary was also designed at this time. Only 40 parishioners could be seated in this small but lovely chapel, so it was used for intimate services and weddings during the construction of the new main building. The Little Chapel was also furnished with a carved antique altar, an altar cross, and a Vienna reed organ, which was later replaced by the Hammond which was not needed in the sanctuary after the pipe organ was installed.

On April 15, 1956, the first services were held in the present sanctuary. On Friday evening, April 20, a service of consecration took place. This was followed by a reception for Peninsula ministers, contractors and architects. At that time Geza St. Galy unveiled the ceramic mosaic, Flight Into Egypt, which is now on the church porch.

SINCE MANY EVENTS in Christian history have occurred in gardens, it seems appropriate that a Biblical Garden should occupy the land in front of the Church of the Wayfarer.

Actually, this garden was first started in 1940 by Mrs. George Beardsley, who had it designed by Butler Sturdevant. Sturdevant included plants native to the Holy Land: olive, date, palm, fig, pomegranate, tamarish, giant reed, myrtle, papyrus, sweet flay, boxwood, cedar of Lebanon, rockrose, coriander, cypress, St. John's Bread tree, prostrate yew, berberis, raphiolepis, geraniums, Jerusalem cherry, as well as a variety of other grasses and herbs. Since Carmel's climate is so similar to the Holy Land, most of the original plants still flourish.

By 1950, the Biblical Garden contained so many flora that Mrs. Blanchard Steeves, who contributed plants and labor to the garden's construction, published a 10-page booklet, cataloguing the names of the flora, with Biblical verses that referred to them.

In January 1965, the Women's Society of the church provided money to relandscape the garden. Mrs. James Bishop of Bishop's Gardens did the designing. In 1968 The Biblical Garden booklet was expanded, illustrated, and new material was added by Mrs. Fred Farley and Mrs. Jack Simpson. Visitors may still purchase copies of this booklet.

Over the years, various decorations have been added to the garden: a mosaic cross; a tile mural, The Flight Into Egypt, and a mosaic panel, In The Beginning God—all created by Geza St. Galy. A granite sundial, a birdbath and a drinking fountain add to the garden's beauty, which provides a beautiful setting for wedding pictures and a delightful place to rest and meditate on its benches.

ALTHOUGH THE SERENITY of the chapel and garden might easily convince one that the church has never known strife, this is not true. The Wayfarer, like any institution that has served a community for such a long time, has endured internal disputes.

When the church was established as the First Methodist Episcopal Church of Carmel, it was the only active church in the village.

From the beginning, it welcomed Christians of all denominations into its membership and was frequently called "The Church" without any reference to Methodism. Over the years it took on many of the aspects of a community church and the diversity of denomination among its members continued.

On Aug. 18, 1940, the Church League adopted the name "Church of the Wayfarer" at the suggestion of Dr. James Crowther, minister at that time. Dr. Crowther, recognizing that the Carmel congregation was made up of sojourners from all parts of the country and that Christians are traditionally wayfarers along the way, believed the new name was appropriate. The name was made legal in the articles of incorporation in 1949, and bylaws adopted by the membership in 1957 stated that the church welcomed into its membership all persons of Christian faith and purpose.

But shortly thereafter, a disagreement arose among the members as to whether this was in fact a Methodist or a community church.

Two factions developed, each strong in its beliefs about the status of the church.

In 1961, the pro-Methodist group filed suit in the Superior Court to determine if the Church of the Wayfarer was an autonomous community church or if it was subject to the discplines of the Methodist Conference.

Debate and disagreement continued until October 1963 when the membership voted to settle the dispute without a court trial. They agreed to split the membership and assets with the existing church retaining the name "Wayfarer" and continuing as a Methodist church. Members favoring a non-denominational church withdrew their membership and formed the nucleus of the Community Church of the Monterey Peninsula. This division greatly reduced the membership, but the church was strengthened by adversity and recovered from this period of difficulty to resume its place in the community.

EVEN AFTER WEATHERING the storms of a great depression, two World Wars—and its own internal conflicts—the Wayfarer continues to minister to the needs of its members and community now as then.

Over the past 75 years, the church has broadened its services and support, not only to an ever-widening segment of Carmel citizens, but also the world.

THE EXTENSIVE 1940 remodeling of the Church of the Wayfarer is pictured in this photograph. During reconstruction the "Little Chapel" was used for services and weddings.

Presently, the Church of the Wayfarer supports Outreach programs, religious education, scholarships, fellowship groups and retreats.

The history of the Outreach program of the Church of the Wayfarer is in keeping with the long tradition of the Methodist church support for missionary work and philanthropic activities at home and abroad.

Some of the charitable organizations the church has sponsored over the years are the Chinzel Gakuin School of Ishaya, Japan; The World Service Fund; The Korean Beggan Home; the Frank Laubach literary project in Mexico; the American Leprosy Mission; Meals for Millions; Chinese National Evangelism; Church World Services; East Pakistan Relief; Guatamala Relief; Overseas Relief to India; Peru Relief; Red Bird Mission (Appalachia) and the Tom Dooley Foundation.

And the Church of the Wayfarer has been equally generous to local charitable groups. Among the list of recipients are the Children's House in Carmel Valley; Beacon House in Pacific Grove; California migrant workers; the Monterey Peninsula YMCA; Meals on Wheels (serving the entire Peninsula), and Operation Shoestring (child care center, Seaside). This list represents only a small portion of the Wayfarer's benevolent support.

THE HISTORY OF religious education at the Church of the Wayfarer is almost as old as the church itself.

Church records show that in 1905, Mrs. E.G. White organized the first Sunday school, which she taught for a number of years.

The Wayfarer has presented a number of interesting programs during the summer, including spiritually accented movies, annual summer backpacking trips and country retreats and camps, which have been funded by pancake breakfasts and suppers.

The Rev. Charles C. Anker, one of the present ministers, said, "The Sunday school classes are designed to acquaint the children with Christian traditions through stories from the Old and New Testament."

Besides the Sunday school classes for youngsters through sixth grade, the Wayfarer also provides a Sunday nursery for toddlers, a Youth Fellowship Group which usually meets evenings, and offers special religious classes for adults with lectures, films and discussion groups that examine Christian ethics and history.

In the fall of 1976, it was decided that the Church of the Wayfarer should extend its Outreach program to include an annual contribution to the local community in the form of scholarships to graduates of local high schools or Monterey Peninsula College. It was later proposed that a trust fund be established for scholarships. Interest from these funds, placed in a long-term account, guarantees the continuation of this project. Both academic and vocational students are eligible for this $1,000 scholarship which is awarded annually.

DURING THE 75-year history of the Wayfarer, 25 ministers, including two interim ministers, have served the Carmel congregation. Each of these men left his imprint upon the character and growth of the church and made contributions to the high esteem in which the church is held in the community, yet biographical records of several of the ministers are scarce.

ASSOCIATE MINISTER of the Church of the Wayfarer, Charles C. Anker, stands in the Biblical Garden, where plants indigenous to the Holy Land thrive.

Seventeen of these ministers served the church and community for periods of less than three years. Two of the past ministers who made great contributions to the church were James E. Crowther, who was minister from 1940 to 1947, and Dr. K. Fillmore Gray, who served the parish for the longest period, from 1947 to 1964.

Dr. Crowther was long interested and active in missionary work and at one time served as secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions.

Before coming here, Dr. Crowther had been pastor of some of the strongest Methodist churches in the country. While at the University Methodist Temple in Seattle, Wash., in 1919, he wrote the script and arranged the music for a religious pageant, The Wayfarer, from which the name of the Carmel church was derived. The pageant depicted the progress of man and was a colossal production, with a cast of 3,000 participating in a parade.

Violet Hess, a current member of the church, lived in Seattle at the time and took part in the great spectacle. She described the pageant as "a terrifying display of the course of man from the beginning of time up to the somber beginning of World War I. Dr. Crowther was a great character; he did it right and knew exactly what he wanted."

Dr. Crowther was beloved by all of Carmel. He emphasized the community or non-denominational character of the church and considered it a unique experience in Christian unity. In March 1947, Dr. Crowther died only a few days after he announced his intentions to retire in June.

AFTER THE DEATH of Dr. Crowther, Dr. K. Fillmore Gray was chosen to replace him and his pastorate began on June 29, 1947. He remained for the next 17 years, the longest service of any of the Wayfarer ministers.

Approaching the ministry with enthusiasm and vigor, Dr. Gray's accomplishments were numerous. Following a successful building program, the sanctuary, Youth Building and offices were completed and the pipe organ was installed.

The music program was expanded by forming adult, children's and hand bell choirs. The Bach Festival was honored in the church services and there was a series of organ concerts. Moreover, fellowship groups were organized: Men of the Wayfarer, Voyagers, and the Couples Club.

During Dr. Gray's ministry art objects were acquired to enhance the beauty of the church and annual religious art shows began.

All of these accomplishments helped increase the Wayfarer membership and strengthen community admiration for the church.

During most of his ministry here in Carmel, Dr. Gray followed the concept of the community church. However, toward the end of his term, he decided that the Wayfarer should, in fact, be a Methodist church.

After leaving Carmel, Dr. Gray served at Temple United Methodist Church in San Francisco and at Alamo. Sadly, Dr. Gray died on Tuesday, Oct. 18 in Walnut Creek following a lengthy illness. He was 66. Dr. Gray was respected by many Carmelites who will long remember his dedication to the people of Carmel and the Church of the Wayfarer.

THE PRESENT MINISTERS, Dr. Paul R. Woudenberg and Charles C. Anker, associate minister, are leading the Wayfarer into a future as productive as its past.

The Rev. Anker was formerly associated with Dr. Woudenberg in Santa Monica where he was an associate minister of the First United Methodist Church. His duties in Santa Monica, as in Carmel, included education, a youth program, study groups and, of course, regular pastoral duties of the parish.

The Rev. Anker is a youthful-looking 46-year-old, who jogs 10-11 miles a day and who is training so he can compete in a 26-mile marathon race.

Dr. Woudenberg describes his associate as "a warm, kind, soft kind of man. I think we're a good match, because we balance out the personality of the church. I'm a bit more aggressive, while he's more subtle. He's extremely sensitive and generous. People relate to him so easily."

The Rev. Anker said that he and Dr. Woudenberg "get along very well. Paul has very low ego needs, so it's been delightful working with him. We have very similar natures—of course he's more of a car nut than I am—but aside from that we are very similar. We're both committed to pastoral ministries, aiding people."

DR. WOUDENBERG, an incredibly diverse man, has imbued the church with an exciting new spirit.

In 1952 he graduated cum laude from the Boston University School of Theology. He wrote a doctoral dissertation on Pauline thought in Albert Schweitzer, and twice visited Dr. Schweitzer in Africa.

Moreoever, Dr. Woudenberg's hobbies are various, as are his civic and other extra-curricular activities in the community.

As an authority on antique cars, he has lectured widely and written a book on automobile history and restoration titled Ford in the Thirties. He is also drafting a similar book on the Lincoln automobile. He builds model steam engines, is an authority on harpsichord construction and an expert skier.

Before coming to Carmel, Dr. Woudenberg served as minister in three churches in Los Angeles County, the last of which was the First United Methodist Church of Santa Monica, the largest Methodist church in the Los Angeles district.

Ann Welchner, director of the children's choir, describes Dr. Woudenberg as a "fine and brilliant man. Besides radiating great feelings of Christianity, he also impresses me as a highly educated man; a great many outsiders come to visit and he gives them something spiritual to take home with them.

"He is extremely spiritually uplifting and a great leader. A minister should be a leader, and Dr. Woudenberg is a born leader. He knows where he's going and his presence has lifted the church and taken it forward."

DR. WOUDENBERG SAYS HE was eager to serve the Carmel parish because "I wanted the personal contact with the congregation.

"In a small community the minister knows everyone by name. In Santa Monica I served the largest Methodist church in the Los Angeles District. We had nearly 2,000 members. In Carmel I have the character of being a padre in a village. I enjoy that. I can be more responsive to the members."

To punctuate this remark, Dr. Woudenberg's phone rang just as he made his comment. Learning that the caller was a parishioner whose mother was very ill, he excused himself, told her to phone an ambulance and said he would meet her at the hospital.

Later, he listed another reason for choosing the Carmel parish. "I love the Peninsula. I like driving three miles through the woods to the church, seeing the beautiful landscape. I've been familiar with the Peninsula for many years. I was a seaman here many years ago."

HE BELIEVES THAT the Wayfarer, like Carmel itself, has a unique character. "We have a very special constituency here in Carmel. They're really unique. The people of this community are highly sophisticated, much more so than in poorer communities. Because of their wealth they bring much more experience with them.

"The age of our members is also unique. Young people clawing their way up the ladder of ambition can't afford to live here, so we consequently have a congregation of more mature years. The demography here in unique."

The Rev. Anker agreed with this and added, "People from all over the world choose Carmel for their home. Many successful people. That's why our community is rich with talent, skills and intellect.

"Yet, of course, the people are also similar to others, they have the same problems. They die of cancer, have financial problems and problems with their children. Although the people are unique in many ways, the human character and human problems are universal no matter where you are, no matter how wealthy or talented the people are."

ASKED TO MORE narrowly define the unique character of the Wayfarer Church, Dr. Woudenberg said, "Every church has a personality. And the minister, in part, shapes that personality with his direction. Of course, there are other influences.

"In defining our character, I want to say we're not innovative, but that sounds negative. What I really mean is that we believe in doing the old things well. We're not trying to be avant garde. We are orthodox and traditional. We're not interested in promoting. We just want to do a pastoral and priestly job, with an emphasis on the pastoral. Some churches attempt to build empires. We're not program builders. The emphasis here is on pastoral responsibilities, not on hype and promotion. We serve people and God."

OF MEDIUM BUILD and soft facial features, Dr. Woudenberg is an articulate man with an eager and pleasing wit. He speaks on many subjects with enthusiasm and authority. But one extraordinary aspect of his life, of which he speaks with particular pride and ebullience, is his 1959 and 1962 trips to Africa to visit Albert Schweitzer:

"Schweitzer was a remarkable man! So disciplined! He achieved more in his life than four men; he was always working, yet he was gracious and seemed to have all the time in the world to sit down with you.

"He survived in the most wretched conditions. He certainly must have been a strong man. Well, in fact he was. He lived to be 90! He's receiving a lot of unfair criticism lately. Some writers are suggesting that Schweitzer supported colonialism, but that's unfair. Albert Schweitzer was responsible for breaking up slave trade. Black natives were selling to blacks down the river, and he was responsible for putting an end to that. I conclude one of my lectures on Schweitzer with this thought: 'Albert Schweitzer had French sensitivity, German discipline, hands skillful to heal, lips eloquent to testify, immemorial Christianity in his heart.' You see, he had it all.

"Did you know the man had four doctoral degrees? In medicine, philosophy, theology, and music. And he could write with authority in all fields. He could speak, write, organize, heal. Such a rare combination. All of this together in one life. And yet he was no nice, so kind, so thoughtful of others.

"Here's a little story for you. On the day I was leaving, Albert ducked out of breakfast. I asked a nurse if he was off on an emergency. I thought perhaps someone was ill. She said, 'No, Dr. Schweitzer went down to the boat to make sure your baggage was packed properly.' That's how he was, always thinking of others. Can you imagine a remarkable man like Schweitzer worried about my luggage? He was remarkable."

Within reach of Dr. Woudenberg's desk there is a shelf reserved for Schweitzer's books. Stored in one of those books is a carefully folded, handwritten letter from Schweitzer. Dr. Woudenberg handled it with great delicacy as he showed it to this reporter.

IT IS SURELY NO disservice to Dr. Albert Schweitzer to describe Dr. Woudenberg and the Rev. Anker as equally remarkable men, for though their names and work have not gained universal familiarity, each of their souls is instilled with a commitment to the elevation and brotherhood of mankind, as well as to the love of God.

Both Dr. Woudenberg and the Rev. Anker agree that the character of the Church of the Wayfarer should remain as it has—ministering to the needs of humans, not religious empires.

They look toward to the church's centennial celebration, for they know the Wayfarer will continue as evidence of God's Kingdom on earth, and as a testimony to the permanence of the Gospel, human love, benevolence and fellowship on earth.

'The Windsor Story'

The visit to Hitler's Germany

(Editor's note: The duke of Windsor frequently was accused of having pro-German tendencies during World War II. This feeling about him was fueled by a trip he made, just before the outbreak of hostilities, to Hitler's Germany under sponsorship of the inventor of the discredited Bedaux speedup system, who later was arrested as a Nazi collaborator.)

By CHARLES J.V. MURPHY and J. BRYAN III

"THE DEVIL FINDS WORK for evil hands."

Before the honeymoon of the duke and duchess of Windsor was half over, the devil, in the plausible guise of Charles Bedaux, had devised a sorry piece of work for the brother whom King George VI had unwisely left in idleness.

(Charles Eugene Bedaux emigrated from France to the United States, where he was naturalized at the age of 30 in 1917. A few years later, he devised the "Bedaux system," which used time-and-motion studies to increase individual workers' output. Denounced by American labor as a form of stretch-out and speedup, it was adopted by Josef Stalin as the pilot model for his far harsher Stakhanovism in the Soviet Union in 1935.

(Bedaux provided his Chateau de Cande, near Tours, France, for the Windsors' wedding on June 3, 1937. Adolf Hitler had shut his operations in Germany, but Bedaux was clandestinely maneuvering among powerful Nazis to start them up again. Before long, his ambition and cupidity would make him their collaborator—a traitor to both the land of his birth and the country of his adoption.)

BEING HOST FOR THE WEDDING of the former king had vastly heightened the prestige of Bedaux among Nazi leaders. In Berlin, he was received by Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, the Nazis' financial genius, and in return for $50,000, most of which was an outright contribution to the National Socialist Party, Dr. Schacht authorized him to resume his German operations, but under the supervision of the Nazi Labor Front, headed by the notorious Dr. Robert Ley. Whether it was now that Bedaux broached Windsor's desire to visit Germany is not clear.

Windsor himself remembered: "My recollection is that Bedaux was enthusiastic about the splendid things I would find in Germany. However, he had gone no further than hints to German friends that I would welcome an opportunity to see for myself how well the country was doing under National Socialism. He talked mostly about Dr. Schacht's grasp of monetary theory, a subject which fascinated Bedaux.

"I remember his explaining to me a scheme for having the Bedaux work-unit adopted as an international unit of value, as an alternative to gold. It was all over my head. He did advance a new thought, though, during this talk. It was that if out tour ever came off, I should broaden it to take in different segments of German industry, as well as the latest housing developments ... I saw nothing wrong in having a look at the new factories, but it was the housing that really interested me. I was wholly ignorant of the politics and economics of labor. I did know something about housing."

IF THE IMPLICATIONS of his German visit were vague to Windsor, they were not to the promoter. Bedaux was gambling that in his bid for preference in the Nazi industrial system, Windsor could be his high card. His appearance in Germany would be construed worldwide as approval of the Nazi regime. It would also spread embarrassment through Whitehall and the whole empire, by suggesting that a substantial body of British opinion agreed with him that the Germans weren't all bad.

By the end of August 1937, Bedaux had in hand an invitation for the Windsors to come to Germany as Ley's guests. He urged Windsor to follow up the German tour with a tour of the United States. On this second one, as on the first, Windsor would present himself as a keen, well-grounded student of housing and labor. In the States, however, he would appear openly under Bedaux's sponsorship and Bedaux's American enterprises would pay the expenses.

THE WINDSORS' GERMAN TOUR was to last two weeks and take them from Berlin to Dresden, Nuremberg, Essen, Stuttgart and Munich. They would be shown housing, hospitals, youth camps, factories and other public works and would have private meetings with senior Nazi officials. They were also assured that Hitler would almost certainly receive them.

Windsor was shocked to learn that Ley wanted to stage an enormous Nazi rally at every stop, in order to show "Germany's admiration for the king whom the British ruling classes had foolishly and ungenerously dismissed."

The train bringing the Windsors to Berlin arrived at Friedrichstrasse Station on Oct. 11. Awaiting them was a large Nazi delegation, headed by the burly Ley. The British delegation consisted solely of the embassy's young third secretary.

Through most of their travels in the Third Reich, their escort was not a dignified industrialist, as they had been led to expect, but Ley, a drunken, boastful, one-time street brawler.

'His most egregious blunder was in going to Germany at all, as the guest of a brutal dictatorship'

He provided a glittering black Mercedes-Benz, top down, half a block long, with two black-uniformed SS guards. Ley squeezed his bulging body between his frail guests and raced them at autobahn speeds along the main avenues, the wind clawing at their faces, and the sirens blaring. Windsor said, "We were made to feel like trophies, on exhibition."

The Windsors detested Ley. The duke judged him "very lewd, very coarse, fond of off-color jokes." The duchess was even less flattering: "A drunkard, a fanatic, quarrelsome, a four-flusher."

THE DUCHESS' JUDGMENTS of the Nazi leaders were sharp.

Dr. Goebbels, the director of propaganda, "a tiny, wispy gnome with an enormous skull," she marked as the cleverest of the lot; Rudolf Hess, Hitler's closest political adviser, "charming of manner and good-looking," as the most civilized; Heinrich Himmler, the chief of the gestapo, as the most deceptive, a "bespectacled meekness" giving him the misleading air of "a clerk caught up in politics"; and Field Marshal Hermann Goering as the most trustworthy.

The evidence strongly suggests that the Windsors' fortnight in the company of Hitler and his lieutenants was nothing more reprehensible than a sight-seeing trip, devoid of politics. Indeed, Windsor insisted that politics was never discussed, at least on his side, not even during the meeting with Hitler.

Windsor enjoyed himself in Germany. The high standards of social welfare set by both the Nazi masters and private industry genuinely surprised him and aroused his admiration. But that did not make him pro-Nazi. Many highly placed Britons and most American tourists were equally impressed by Germany's surge of prosperity under Hitler.

HIS MOST EGREGIOUS BLUNDER was in going to Germany at all, as the guest of a brutal dictatorship. His fast-dwindling legion of admirers were disturbed by his presence there; his critics were suspicious of his motives. Rumors had him belitting in private conversations the competence of British politicans, and even doubting their ability to resist a resolute German bid for the domination of Europe.

While the Windsors were still in Germany, Bedaux and his associates in the United States had embarked on a campaign to stir up public interest in the American extension of the tour.

Bedaux took his place in full view alongside the Windsors, as their sponsor and impressario.

MR. AND MRS. Charles Bedaux, at whose chateau the Duke and Duchess were married. His connections with Nazi Germany subsequently caused the royal couple considerable embarrassment.

Alas, before the Windsors had even finished their packing, Bedaux's cloud-capped towers had dissolved. So had his business career in the United States. Inevitably, the publicity exposed his trafficking with the Nazis and his backstage role in the Windsors' German excursion. Worse still, it brought all parties to the attention of two groups whose publicists were scanning the horizon for targets of opportunity in their separate appeals for support on highly charged issues.

ONE GROUP WAS THE JEWS; justly appalled by the persecution of their kin in Germany, they determined—with the help of their liberal, leftist, anti-fascist sympathizers in the media and in public life—to shame those who lent respectability to the Nazi dictator.

The other group was organized labor; its American tacticians had had no institutional interest in the Windsors until their connection with Bedaux came usefully to hand. Labor had always found Bedaux's incentive system offensive, but because he was small-fry alongside the major industries which the unions were fighting to organize, it had not deemed him worth much ammunition. The disclosure of his link with Windsor's German tour now, made him a profitable target.

The practical result of the attacks was to make the Windsors a shuttlecock in an ideological contest. New York longshoremen threatened to boycott their ship. In Baltimore, the local unit of the American Federation of Labor attacked Bedaux as the "arch-enemy" of labor and vowed that its members would ignore the receptions being arranged for the Windsors.

The Bedaux "work-like-hell" system was damned as an "indirect, cumbersome and mystifying" tax on the working man's energies. The Congress of Industrial Organizations called it "the most completely exhausting inhuman 'efficiency' system ever invented," and accused Bedaux himself of living "on workers' sweat."

The Windsor luggage was waiting on the quay at Cherbourg, when the duke had a sudden change of heart. He canceled his passage and announced the abandonment of his tour.

THE DUKE NEVER BLAMED BEDAUX for the wreck of their splendid enterprise. Both agreed that they had been the victims of a slanderous attack by a cabal of communists, radical unionists and influential Jews.

"But for them," Windsor said pathetically, "the duchess and I would have gone to America and we might well have settled there."

Bedaux dined with the Windsors as late as November 1939, well after the beginning of World War II.

By then, Bedaux was already beginning to build a reputation as the Nazis' ranking industrialist collaborator. After the fall of France in 1940, he emerged as the Germans' favored instrument for a number of major jobs.

In North Africa, Bedaux was arrested first by the Free French, then released because he carried an American passport, then arrested again, in December, at the request of the U.S. Army.

In December 1943, he was flown to Miami. There, in his jail cell, on the night of Feb. 18, 1944, while a court was attempting to decide whether he should be tried for treason as an American citizen and possibly hanged, or sent back to France to be shot, he took his own life with a handful of sleeping pills.

Housing authority to manage facility

Flurry of events complicates various efforts to preserve Rippling River for the handicapped

By STEVE HELLMAN

A FLURRY OF EVENTS has complicated the efforts to preserve Rippling River as a "hotel for the handicapped" in Carmel Valley:

• The Monterey County Housing Authority approved a contract Oct. 22 with the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) to take over temporary management of the financially ailing facility.

• The decision to assume interim management will assist the housing authority in its plan to purchase the facility, according to Bruce Moore, executive director of the county housing authority. Moore said last week that HUD has completed processing the housing authority's $1.7 million plan to convert the handicapped facility into a low-income apartment complex.

• Handicapped residents overwhelmingly oppose the conversion plan, and employees who have joined the opposition say they will quit if the housing authority takes over as interim boss. They claim that HUD is trying to keep the facility in government hands, although HUD has been trying to sell Rippling River since it assumed ownership by default in 1976.

• A group of private individuals submitted a letter to HUD on Oct. 22 declaring its intention to present a proposal to preserve Rippling River solely for the handicapped. The 11-member group, calling itself the Tri-County Steering Committee, will present three alternative proposals to HUD within a week, according to the group's spokesman, Sabastian Bordonaro.

• Residents have formed an organization called CARR (Citizens' Association of Rippling River). According to spokesman Scott Beasley, CARR will work to preserve Rippling River for handicapped residents through fund-raising events, recruitment of more residents and publicity work.

• Two weeks ago the current manager of Rippling River, Eskaton Business Services, announced it would terminate its management contract with HUD after three years. Eskaton's decision to withdraw by Jan. 1, 1980, follows accusations that it mismanaged the facility, causing financial losses to HUD that are now running $25,000 per month.

HOUSING AUTHORITY commissioners unanimously approved the management contract Oct. 11. The contract calls for a monthly fixed fee of $1,200 per month, plus reimbursement of all costs incurred as the interim manager.

Moore said that to avoid upsetting the residents and operation, the housing authority will attempt to retain present employees. He said that the transition to full-time owner and operator could be smoother because of the temporary management arrangement.

"It will put folks through fewer changes if we take over now instead of someone else," Moore said.

Temporary management of the facility by the housing authority or another private firm was proposed by HUD, according to Bernard Deasy, the HUD deputy director in charge of Rippling River.

Deasy said that if the housing authority assumed the temporary role, it would not affect HUD's consideration of the proposed $1.7 million conversion plan. "It's a separate transaction," Deasy stated last week.

But Moore said, "We're assuming we're going to complete the acquisition. HUD has approved our proposal and the only hurdle is the county Planning Commission.

"We intend to interview and extend the opportunity to the present staff to keep their jobs. But we're not making any commitments at this time," he said.

The housing authority proposed last year to buy the 150-unit facility for $700,000, and with an additional $1 million loan from HUD, convert it into a 79-unit apartment complex for low-income elderly and handicapped persons. The present 26 residents would be "grand-fathered" into the project, according to Moore, and provided the necessary meal and housekeeping services on a fee basis.

The handicapped residents contend the conversion will force them out of their home. Their pleas before the county Planning Commission in September during the hearing on the use permit for the conversion project led to a postponement until Nov. 28 to allow the private group of investors time to prepare a counter-proposal.

BORDONARO, WHO WAS the architect for Rippling River when it was remodeled as a facility for the handicapped in 1975, initiated the formation of the Tri-County Steering Committee. In his Oct. 22 letter to HUD, Bordonaro asked for a meeting with representatives to discuss the group's proposals.

The purpose of the committee, Bordonaro stated, is to develop a program for housing the disabled that will both enhance the current operation and maintain the original intent of Rippling River.

"The steering committee has the ingredients to make it work," Bordonaro told this reporter.

He said that the committee has: (a) connections with agencies that have the funds available for handicapped; (b) private contacts for further financial assistance; (c) and the managerial background and professional expertise to operate the facility.

THE COMMITTEE INCLUDES Peter Arbello of Santa Cruz, president of the California Association of the Physically Handicapped who is a paraplegic; and William Hewitt, director of Supportive Services at Cabrillo Community College in Aptos and a regional trainer and rehabilitation counselor for disabled within the California community colleges.

Bordonaro noted that Hewitt initiated the successful support services at Cabrillo, building it into a million-dollar program. Arbello is a handicapped person who plays basketball and throws the javelin while confined to a wheelchair.

Other members are Dr. Gene England, president of the Behavioral Sciences Institute in Carmel, which specializes in hearing and speech therapy; Dr. Donald Scanlon of Carmel, a paraplegic, who is a physician and director of cardiology at Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula; Sharon Kaplan of Monterey Peninsula College, a rehabilitation counselor for disabled students; Robert Ludlow, a Santa Cruz attorney who is also a quadraplegic, an athletics director for the handicapped and a member of the Community Colleges Advisory Board for the Disabled; George Shirley, a Pacific Grove attorney, and his wife, Kathy Shirley, a nurse's aide to convalescent hospitals; Mike Sullivan, an economic consultant; Frances Libby, a housekeeping supervisor at Rippling River, and two handicapped persons, Kristine Hofsheier of Seaside and Willis Ludemann of Pebble Beach.

"With this group," Bordonaro said, "we can make Rippling River a home for the handicapped as well as a place to provide rehabilitation services. They know what the problems are.

"Someone suddenly struck with a handicap has to learn to cope, to learn all over again how to walk, talk and care for himself," he explained.

Rippling River does not have to be a "terminus point," Bordonaro said. It can provide a cycling or continuation program for the handicapped, thereby serving many more than just a handful of residents.

The problem in the past is that the facility lacks certain designs to qualify for state licensing. But Bordonaro contends this can be resolved with the right amount of money and expertise.

LIBBY, WHO HAS worked at Rippling River since it opened its doors, said last week, "If the housing authority manages Rippling River, you won't find me on the grounds.

"I don't like their basic ideas about the handicapped or their tactics. I know other employees feel the same," she said.

She insisted that the proposal from the Tri-County Steering Committee was good enough to replace the housing authority plan.

"There's far more potential for education and services to the handicapped with our proposal. It will offer a temporary rehabilitation center for hundreds of handicapped," she said.

If HUD refuses the offer, she said, we'll know it's a put-up deal with the housing authority. We'll know that HUD wants to keep it in government hands to cover up its mistakes.

"By the end of December, we'll know one way or the other," Libby said.

The county planning commission granted the postponement until Nov. 28, with an automatic 30-day extension possible if it is necessary for the group to present its proposal.

Parents urge MPT to 'relieve' students bus fare

MONTEREY PENINSULA Transit has been asked to provide "relief" for students of Junipero Serra School and Carmel High School who have to ride the bus into Carmel Valley.

Both schools are located just outside the boundary of the one-fare zone into the Valley. Students have to either pay the two-zone 75 cents for a ride, or walk to the bus stop in front of Brinton's in the Carmel Rancho Shopping Center. From Brinton's the fare into the Valley is 35 cents.

Betty Williams of Carmel Valley and other parents have complained to bus transit officials that students are crossing and walking along Highway 1 to reach the Brinton's bus stop. It would be safer for students if they are given discount fares to ride through the zone boundary, according to Williams.

Bill Rand, assistant superintendent of the Carmel Unified School District, has asked the board of directors of the transit company to consider the matter at its next meeting. The meeting is scheduled for Monday, Nov. 5, at 9 a.m. at the office of the transit company on Ryan Ranch Road in Del Rey Oaks.

"We're asking for some kind of relief, either passes or transfers," Rand said Monday. He said that the high school is located only a quarter-mile outside the Valley zone. Junipero Serra School is located only two blocks beyond the Valley zone.

STUDENT DISCOUNTS are not possible, according to Tom Albert, general manager of the transit company. "It would mean financial disaster if we gave discounts to students. They're a substantial part of our ridership," Albert said.

In Santa Cruz County student discounts have already been offered and withdrawn after it was found that they cut too much into fare revenues, Albert said.

The solution he could recommend to the board of directors would be to expand the boundary to include Junipero Serra School in the Valley zone. But he said it would be a "major" change to include Carmel High School. If the boundary were re-drawn for the high school, it would take in too much of the city of Carmel, he said.

"We're recognizing that there is a problem," Albert said. "But the zone boundary has to divide the rural areas from the city. It costs much more to service the rural areas."

IS THE "PROPHET" without honor in his own country? Is that why Mike Brown is against annexation? Which means, that as Mike's undeclared, but very obvious campaign for mayor is now well under way, the possibility of his "influencing" his neighbors, if annexation went through, to vote for him is nil.

Mike has been against annexation all along. His statement on TV about "I've been studying the facts, now that they are in, for the past few weeks" is ridiculous. Mike insisted, and persuaded a "consultant" to make another study on annexation last spring after LAFCO's and Jack Collins' studies were presented.

The problem is that Mike's studies haven't been able to come up with any good way of juggling the figures yet to show what he wants them to show.

AS NEXT APRIL'S election for City Council begins to seriously raise its head in our level of consciousness (if you haven't thought about it, you'd better start), one of the major things that will be different is, of course, the direct election of the mayor.

I assume you realize that, legally, if a seated councilman runs for mayor, and wins, he or she then has the authority to immediately appoint someone to fill his seat.

Think about it.

MIKE BROWN WAS "speaking as a resident" in his most recent TV interview. I would be more impressed with that TV station's coverage of Carmel if they did real man-in-the-street interviews.

Mr. Brown seems to be the only Carmelite that station knows.

UNDERSTAND THAT A barrister of local origin, pinned (swiftly and eloquently) Mike's ears back at the Oct. 22 public hearing on the Local Coastal Plan.

Seems that another "tall, slender, dark-haired stranger, who didn't give me his name, but was a staff member of the Coastal Commission" was Mike's "authority" on stating that "the commission did not want commercialism on the Patterson property".

Mr. Etienne then produced (from City Hall files) a letter from the commission, written after the above stated conversation which clearly delinated that they wouldn't mind it at all.

WONDER HOW MANY tall, dark-haired, un-named strangers haunted Mr. Brown this All Hallow's Eve?

THE THEME SONG of the "loyal opposition" for the forthcoming council election is rumored to be—

"—Brown's body lies a' molderin' in the grave."

Meanwhile, illegal dump reappears at airport

New trash collection center criticized

By STEVE HELLMAN

COMPLAINTS HAVE BEEN leveled at the new trash collection center nearing completion on Pilot Road in Carmel Valley Village, while not more than three blocks away people are illegally using the end of the Carmel Valley Airport runway as a dump.

An irate resident phoned the Outlook office last week to suggest that the tall arbor that is being built to camouflage the center should be "torn down, it's so ugly.

"What do they think it is, a gas station drive-in?" the caller asked of the three concrete pillars and triangular roof that comprise the garbage gazebo.

"It's shocking ... the county never allowed the Upper Carmel Valley Advisory Committee to review it. They should tear the thing down," she said. The caller refused to identify herself.

THE RECYCLE AND Transfer Station was approved last year by the county Planning Commission with eight conditions attached to the use permit to control odors, noise and truck traffic around the site. The project had been submitted for review to the advisory committee, which recommended unanimously that it be denied a use permit.

However, in recognition of the need to control trash dumping in the Valley, the county Board of Supervisors last February approved the center as an amendment to the Monterey County Solid Waste Management Plan.

When it is completed, the center will serve as a recycling and garbage collection station for the Valley. Trucks will regularly haul the refuse to county disposal sites.

IF THE CENTER is not completed soon, planes landing at the airport will have to dodge an increasing pile of discarded washing machines, used auto parts, old couches and brush trimmings that are accumulating at the east end of the runway.

The county Health Department has ordered the owner of the property, Peter Delfino, to clean up the mess, according to county Litter Control Consultant Welcome Randall.

"It's an illegal dump of large proportions," said Randall. "I'm surprised there hasn't been a furor raised over it."

The area at the east end of the runway above Via Contenta has been used in the past for dumping, Randall said. It was cleaned up about two months ago, but the pile of garbage reappeared.

"I don't understand how people let it happen. It's right in plain view," he said.

Unless the county catches someone dumping there, or comes up with "hard" evidence to prove who the culprits are, there is nothing that can be done except to order Delfino to remove the mess at his expense, Randall said.

RANDALL, WHO WAS hired by the county as a special agent to work on litter control, said that he did not understand the gripe about the recycling center.

"The arbor," he said, "is rather attractive. It sticks way up in the air, but it's not going to be completely open. It's yet to be completed."

The purpose of the arbor is to screen the work area and muffle noises from a large trash-compactor, according to the architect, Sabastian Bordonaro.

"It's intended to be a trellis. It will be covered with vines so that from afar it will look very nice," Bordonaro said.

JIM CARROLL, co-owner of the site, said, "We spent a lot of money on beautification. In fact, we spent twice the money on landscaping than the new post office did. We have an eight-foot high fence. I think it's going to be one of the nicest buildings around here."

He admitted that the dispute over the site dates back to a year ago when residents expressed fears about an infestation of rodents, potential bad odors and increased truck traffic.

But the county conducted traffic studies at the site and found that truck traffic would actually be reduced, according to Carroll. He said the complaints were only the rumors of a disgruntled few.

"I haven't heard any complaints," he said. "But I know you can't build anything in Carmel Valley without complaints. As for odors, there won't be any. And there won't be a problem with rodents either. The county set up a research committee and took all this into account.

"We've taken care of all the concerns. We're still building. Once we get finished, we'll be here for good," he said.

Friends of library to meet Tuesday

Friends of the Carmel Valley Library will meet Tuesday, Nov. 6 at 7:30 p.m. to discuss the possibility of a library expansion.

Progress reports on a new library location will also be discussed at the meeting in the Carmel Valley Library. Anyone interested in these topics is invited. Phone 659-2909 for more information.

VOTE NO ON PROPOSITION A

HERE'S WHY:

Once annexed, we are subject to the whims of Carmel City Hall . . . County areas included now have 13 paid firemen on the job 24 hours a day. Carmel uses volunteers . . . Survey shows 90% of the residents of Carmel Woods and Hatton Fields are against annexation. They feel more confident and secure with the police protection afforded by the Sheriff's department . . . The City of Carmel has not invited the residents to join.

USERS FEES? HERE ARE THE FACTS: for 13 years CSA 43 paid taxes for fire protection. They rejected the use of volunteers. They wanted a full-time paid fire department and were willing to pay for it. Taxes rose to 88 cents per hundred for Rio Road Fire House and new equipment. NOT ONE VOTER EVER COMPLAINED TO THE CSA 43 ADVISORY COMMITTEE ABOUT THESE TAXES. Prop 13 killed the tax and for 1½ years we used our reserves. This year Legislature permitted us to impose users fees. Starting July 1980, we will have to impose a users fee. This will not be more than about one half of the previous taxes. Hearings will be held by the Supervisors to determine if residents want to keep the present level of fire service (13 men and 3 trucks 24 hours a day). We have never tried to hide these facts as we are confident that residents will wish to continue the finest fire service on the Peninsula. A "Cadillac" of service at reasonable costs.

STEFANO CACASE, OWNER of Stefano's Plant Rentals of Carmel, has been busy the past few weeks improving the former Piccadilly Nursery site on Dolores betwen Ocean and Seventh. Cacace was awarded the year-long sublease on the property by the City Council last September. He plans to relocate his plant rental service to the site. Cacace also plans to expand into a general nursery business. Meanwhile, voters will be asked Tuesday whether the city should purchase the site to preserve it as open space.

Council wants to preserve parcel for open space

Voters asked: should city buy nursery site?

CARMELITES WILL DECIDE through an advisory vote Tuesday whether the city should purchase the former Piccadilly Nursery property on Dolores Street between Ocean and Seventh.

The Carmel City Council decided last July to put the matter to a vote of the electorate in order to resolve a "sensitive" dispute over the site.

Owners Mary Lou Linhart and her brother, George Linsley, proposed last January to develop a shopping mall with six shops, replacing the nursery. The 4,000-square-foot lot and adjoining structure had been a nursery for nearly 40 years.

In an unusual move, the Carmel Planning Commission sidestepped action on the shopping mall proposal, by passing the use permit application forward to the City Council. The site is one of the last remaining open space parcels in the city's business district.

When it reached the council in February, councilmen considered classifying the property "significant open space," as a way to stall development.

LINHART AND LINSLEY, represented by former city planning commissioner Thomas Hawley, complained that the designation would be unfair. At that point, Councilman Howard Brunn suggested that the city purchase the site.

"Delicate negotiations" ensued between Hawley and then-City Administrator Jack Collins and City Attorney George Brehmer.

An owner of a Carmel real estate firm estimated the property's value to be between $250,000 and $300,000. The city reportedly offered $250,000. But by June the closed-door negotiations had not resulted in an agreement.

According to Linsley, the city made the $250,000 offer under threat of condemnation. Before he was able to obtain more information to make a decision, the city suddenly withdrew its offer.

THE OWNERS CONTINUED to receive numerous other offers, and in early July obtained a demolition permit from the city building department to remove the three old structures on the property.

The council prevented the destruction of the three structures by declaring them "significant buildings."

The council also agreed with the owners to lease the property for a year, at $1,000 per month, to provide time for the election and what results it may have on a final decision.

On July 9, the council took its decisive step in its program to preserve the site as open space, approving the advisory measure for the Nov. 6 ballot.

The voters will decide whether the city should purchase the land if the price is in accord with the "fair market value," or acquire it through condemnation.

MAYOR GUNNAR NORBERG opposed the election resolution. He argued that the ballot measure should contain a ceiling price. But Brunn countered Norberg's suggestion. He said, "Putting a figure in the measure would just muddy the waters. It would hamper the negotiations.

"All we simply want," Brunn said, "is a statement from the people telling us whether we should purchase the property."

It would be the city's first land purchase since 1973 when it acquired the 15-acre Flanders property adjacent to Mission Trail Park.

The vote Tuesday is for guidance only, Brehmer explained. The City Council can still decide to purchase the site regardless of the results of Tuesday's election.

The reason for the annexation action

ON AUG. 22, 1978, the Monterey County Board of Supervisors adopted Resolution No. 78-360.

This resolution by the board was an application to initiate annexation proceedings for the unincorporated developed areas around Carmel.

The proposal included the territory west of Highway 1, north of the Carmel River and south of Pescadero Canyon. The neighborhoods included within the proposal were Carmel Point, Carmel Woods, Mission Tract, Mission Fields and Hatton Fields.

The stated reason within the board's resolution for the annexation request was, "It appears to this board that the subject areas proposed for annexation share a community of interest with the city of Carmel and should logically be a part of that city."

ONCE A VALID application has been submitted to the Local Agency Formation Commission (LAFCO) it must be processed and scheduled for public hearing. The matter was initially scheduled for public hearing on Oct. 24, 1978. Due to the complexity and interest expressed over the proposed annexation, the public hearing was rescheduled for Nov. 28, 1978 in Sunset Center in Carmel. The public hearing was well attended.

At the Nov. 28 LAFCO hearing, 13 individuals or organizations spoke in opposition and nine in favor. Following the submittal of protest petitions from the Carmel Point and Mission Tract neighborhoods which contained a majority of the voters, the commission determined to delete those areas. It also deleted the Mission Fields neighborhood because, by including it the Carmel Point area would have been an unincorporated island surrounded by the city. With

THE SHADED AREA shows the 396 acres to be annexed to the city of Carmel, if voters approve the proposal Tuesday.

'Annexation would benefit Carmel Woods, Hatton Fields'

CARMEL ANNEXATION NOW (CAN) is a group of residents of Hatton Fields, Hatton Mesa and Carmel Woods who understand the objective facts of annexation, and know it benefits the residents concerned.

After Proposition 13, counties lost property tax revenue. Counties now can't provide police and fire protection at the pre-Proposition 13 level. Absent annexation, residents will have to "tax" themselves through service fees in addition to property tax, or settle for poorer protection and services.

County Service Area 43, which supplies our fire protection faces this financial problem, now: CSA 43 may need service fees to meet its 1980-1981 budget, payable by each homeowner in addition to property taxes. Otherwise, it will have to reduce its level of fire protection.

The Committee Against Annexation (CAA), headed by two members of the CSA 43 board, St. E.P. Tyner and Jim Neill, neither of whom lives in the areas proposed for annexation, ducks this issue by stridently and recklessly attacking the present city administration as "incompetent," "inept" and "inefficient." It attacks the city's fine services.

It won't debate the issues because CSA 43's financial problem would come out and they can't deny it.

APPARENTLY CAA doesn't care that annexation benefits the residents and is obscuring the facts. The facts show clearly that we should annex. If one doubts that these are facts, they can all be checked out and one certainly is free to do so. Here are the facts:

• No Cost: Annexation will cost us nothing for the things we gain. Prop. 13 froze our taxes and Carmel absolutely can't change them! Carmel hardly relies on property tax at all anyway, because of its sales and motel tax income. However, not annexing may cost us service fees in addition to taxes. Carmel doesn't need these fees because of its other income. Carmel now has $1.7 million in reserves from past revenues,

'Few services--if any-- reaped from annexation'

ANNEXATION, LIKE death, is irrevocable. Before voting, please carefully read the following facts.

For several years the Carmel city government has been crippled by ineptitude of the City Council.

One has only to read the Pine Cone to learn of the turmoil that exists within the city. The record is filled with examples of the callousness of the Carmel council with respect to the wishes of the majority of Carmel residents. One clear example is the recent departure of Jack Collins who, after being granted certain discretionary powers, found the position untenable because of a change arbitrarily imposed by the council.

Annexation to Carmel subjects all of us to a multiplicity of services, most of which are undesired.

Proponents hold out bait that newly annexed areas can have an active part in Carmel government. Even if one councilman could be elected between the two areas, it would be a small voice in the affairs of the city. If annexation takes place, it would be months before it became effective. All in all, it might be more than a year before a councilman could be elected from the annexed area.

COUNTY SERVICE AREA 43 offers 13 fire-academy-trained firefighters plus three Class A fire trucks for any structural fire, day or night. For medical emergency, it provides one truck and four trained personnel.

The Red Cross ambulance, operated by Carmel volunteers, also responds to a medical emergency.

While CSA 43 does not transport patients, their arrival precedes the ambulance by several minutes, minutes which are crucial in providing initial life-saving service, pending the arrival of the ambulance.

There are dozens of testimonials to this effect, and 70 percent of all calls are for medical emergencies. All personnel are fully qualified in cardio-pulmonary resuscitation, as well as EMT (Emergency Medical Technique).

In addition, any fire in the watershed

so it can provide for us!

• Equal Fire Protection: (The opponents admit this.) The county fire warden, Tom Perkins, says Carmel's fire department, part paid and part volunteer, is "excellent."

Not annexing may cost property owners money in fees, in addition to taxes, for fire protection which is no better than Carmel's.

On this "pocketbook" issue alone, sensible persons, especially those on fixed incomes, should vote for annexation.

• Better Police Protection: Quick response time is the single most effective thing in preventing crime and in apprehending offenders.

The Sheriff states its response time averages 10-12 minutes. However, this is a "hit or miss" thing: Some residents report waiting an hour for responses and others five minutes. Why? Because it depends where the Sheriff's patrol happens to be at the time a call is received: Sheriff's Beats No. 6 and No. 7, which now serve us, also cover Pebble Beach, Carmel Knolls, Rio Vista, Carmel Meadows and Carmel Highlands, a huge area. After midnight, the Sheriff sometimes has only one car in these areas.

Carmel police could respond, always, in four minutes or less, from its department located right in the heart of the area. It would constantly patrol only that area, less than two square miles, from Highway 1 west, giving control of Ocean Avenue all the way to Carmel High School.

Woods School would receive Carmel police protection, a great advantage to the children who attend.

The California Highway Patrol out of Salinas now must handle traffic problems in the county area in addition to their first priority on the state highway, as the Sheriff has no jurisdiction over traffic. Carmel police would be right there with annexation.

• Local Political Control, Better City Government: Rather than be represented by one of five county supervisors who has a huge, varied and problem-filled district to cover, annexation would give us our own government with its friendly, neighborly staff, which has similar objectives, concerns and interest to ours and which will be responsive to our needs.

Opponents object to the aberration of certain incumbent, outspoken city councilmen. Proponents of annexation agree that a change is needed in the present council majority. Opposition to annexation on this ground is extremely short-sighted.

Proponents prefer a positive approach to this issue, particularly because of the other overwhelming advantages of annexation. This makes sense. Consider: First, Mayor Norberg's term is up in March, 1980, (only four months away). Second, the area to be annexed contains 1,550 voters and the city, at present, 3,380 voters.

Our additional increment of voters will have a striking impact on the election of councilmen and the city policies. Obviously, we can't influence directly and change the council's complexion by not annexing.

Opponents must admit that they feel strongly affected by the city's policies. Rather than inertly waiting "until things change," one really should face the issue and vote for annexation now, get in there, and help change things for the better! Let's get our "City Hall" away from Salinas and here at home, where it belongs.

• Revenue Transfer and Additions: New recently enacted state law (AB 8) ensures an equitable, negotiated transfer of property tax revenue from the county to the city, so the city will have this source of revenue to use to expand its services after annexation.

In addition, the city will receive state in lieu fees of approximately $107,182 if we annex.

• Same Sewage: No change with annexation. This is regulated by the Carmel Sanitary District, not the city or county.

• Same Mail Service: No change with annexation. Mail delivery will continue.

• Same Fire Insurance Rates: No change with annexation. (Local insurance brokers confirm this.)

• Less Garbage Rates: Less with annexation.

• Same Library Service: No change with annexation.

• Same Zoning: These areas are over 95 percent developed, so a fear of a zoning change is farfetched. The city's precedent is to accept the existing zoning of annexed areas. We all know our friends and neighbors in the city are strong environmentally and residentially oriented.

• Tree Trimming: In Carmel, you can trim or cut down any tree on your property unless you are doing so with the idea of building or remodeling within six months, in which case you must get a permit.

• Philosophy: We are all one community in every way except for the arbitrary fact of a political boundary.

We live here for similar reasons and love the quality of life here. We enjoy the beach, Sunset Center, Forest Theater, Flanders-Doolittle Park, all of which the city owns and maintains, along with all the other rewards of this unique community.

The city of Carmel is the heart of all this. We should do everything we can to ensure that we have our voice in its future stewardship because, if we don't and the heart becomes diseased, the rest of the body will inevitably suffer as a result and we will be politically powerless to prevent it.

We can add to the health and vitality of Carmel and should take it upon ourselves to do so now in our best interests.

One should ask oneself: What is the Committee Against Annexation trying to make us fearful of? Ask your friends and neighbors who now live in Carmel about the convenience and togetherness of knowing and having available to them as personal acquaintances their police chief, fire chief, elected representatives and other city officials.

Change is coming in the county for the worse. We shouldn't be misled by CAA. Rather, we should now seize this golden opportunity to join Carmel officially and keep it to our liking, while we have the chance!

The article for annexation is by Francis "Skip" Lloyd, chairman of Carmel Annexation Now.

'Few services--if any-- reaped form annexation'

area, which includes all the hillsides, receives the additional aid from the state forestry of aerial tankers, bulldozers and trucks.

CSA 43 maintains contracts with the state Division of Forestry for more than 30 fully trained structural firefighters, all of whom have had the six-week course at the IONE Fire Academy. Captains and engineers have had additional courses also. Training is continuous daily under a full-time qualified training officer to keep abreast of improved methods and equipment. The state has given us an excellent manpower package—our men work 72 hours per week and have a fringe benefit of 22 percent. Monterey firemen work 56 hours per week and fringe benefits are more than 35 percent.

CARMEL, WITH ITS fine volunteer force, has only eight paid firemen spread over all shifts, including chief, assistant chief and dispatcher and can not possibly assemble an adequate force as fast as CSA 43. To increase its area is to likewise increase the time and distance of travel of all volunteers.

Annexation would almost double the area of Carmel and require more readily available personnel. Most employers are perfectly willing to have employees serve in a relatively small area (present Carmel), but would be reluctant to have their employees away from their jobs for a longer period because of the larger area due to annexation.

The Insurance Service Office (which sets the ratings for this area) has a factor that requires "four volunteer firemen to equate one full-time paid trained fireman." The 13 people available in CSA 43 would require 52 volunteers to give equal force. Carmel was recently re-inspected by ISO since its last rating was 1958. What the new rating will be is questionable, but should annexation take place, the annexed areas must assume the higher Class 5 now effective in Carmel and any higher rating that may be imposed.

THERE IS ANOTHER side to the question that should be explored. Do the citizens of Carmel want annexation? Carmel's city administrator's report to LAFCO indicated the following: "In the event of annexation, it was proposed to add one additional building inspector and car; five additional policemen and one patrol car; three additional full-time firemen; one street sweeper and operator, an additional tree crew of four people and equipment."

The cost of these people and equipment would have to be paid by all of Carmel, a strong indication of additional taxes in the future.

With respect to the statement that Carmel can effect a working agreement with CSA 43, this requires two things: a desire by Carmel (two Carmel officials have definitely stated they do not want a contract with CSA 43) and an agreement by all of CSA 43 to be willing to share their men and equipment with Carmel. Indications are that the majority of people in CSA 43 would not approve this.

CSA 43 HAS THE lowest fire insurance risk classification on the Peninsula—a Class 4. When the service area was formed, it was a Class 10. Through the acquisition of Class A equipment, the construction of a modern fire station on Rio Road; the addition of more academy-trained personnel and the constant and continous training, the rating was reduced to a Class 4.

A letter from the Insurance Service Office, dated Oct. 31, 1978, over the signature of Clifford A. Ommert, field rating representative, states that "if the proposed areas are annexed to Carmel, they would assume Carmel's Class 5 rating," losing the present Class 4. While the change from 4 to 5 is not so great, what we must consider is the overall reduction in our area from a 10 to a 4.

A LETTER, DATED Sept. 12, 1978, from the sheriff's department, signed by H.C. Gustafson, supervisor of Support Services Division, stated, "In looking at all incidents and statistics, they indicate that Carmel Point, Carmel Woods, Mission Fields and Hatton Fields, represent a very low incident profile, a possible 10 to 12 percent of the Beat 7 area and a possible 2 percent of the total incident rate for the county area."

Several deputies have told us that they consider the Carmel Woods and Hatton Fields areas two of the easiest to cover. During the recent sheriff's deputies strike, the sheriff's office continued to give adequate coverage to these two areas.

Carmel Point and Mission Fields, communities with intelligent inhabitants, have rejected annexation repeatedly ... Carmel Point seven times and Mission Fields five. This certainly tells us something.

The article against annexation is by Step Tyner, chairman of the Committee Against Annexation.

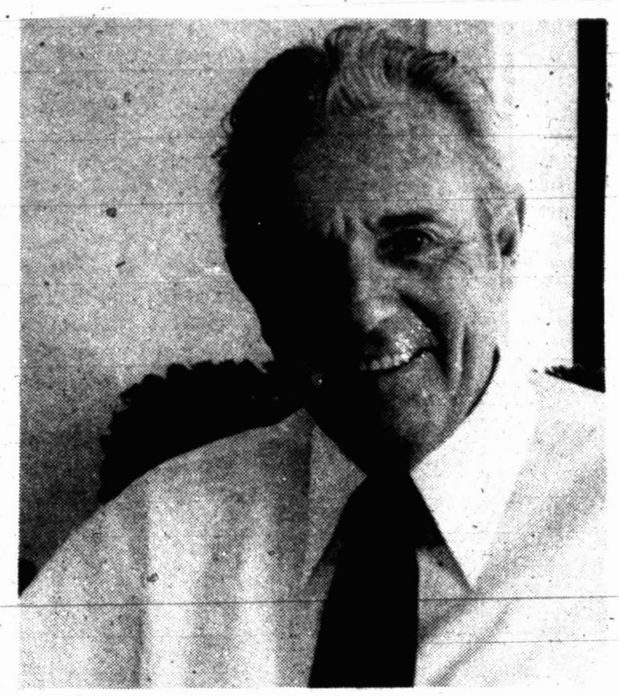
Meet the candidates for

Should Carmel Bay continue to be designated an Area of Special Biological Significance? (The ASBS was ordered by the state in 1975 because of fears that sewage discharge into the bay could harm marine life. The designation has resulted in a ban on annexations within the district.)



Frank Bray

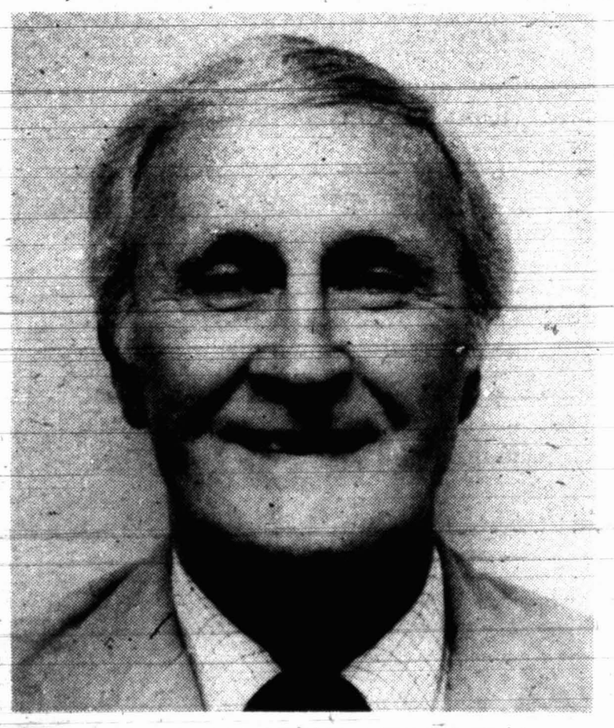
Frank Bray, 62, is the former owner and managing director of the court reporting firm of Bray and O'Daly. He is now retired. A native of California, Bray was raised and educated in San Francisco. He is a veteran of World War II and has been a resident of Monterey County since 1947.

No. Although this area was so designated by the State Water Resources Control Board in June of 1975, to date there has been no significant finding by anyone charged with the responsibility of determining the effects of the effluent discharged by the Carmel Sanitary District Plant into the Carmel Bay indicating a biological threat to the environment. Dr. Isabella Abbott, professor of marine biology, Stanford University, at the Hopkins Marine Station, has publicly stated that although she has made observations in Carmel Bay since 1960, she has yet to find any danger to the environment. On the contrary, she states that in her opinion the installation of the outfall line is a biologically sound move. The ban on annexation imposed within the district has been maninly to inhibit the daily flow of effluent into the Carmel Bay in order to conform to the mandate of the regulatory state conditions imposed in 1975.

Charlotte Hurst

Charlotte Hurst is seeking her second four-year term as a director of the Carmel Sanitary District. She is a graduate of Sunset School and Stanford University. She has done graduate work at the universities of Zurich, Heidelberg and Sorbonne. Hurst has been active in the community. She has served as a director of the Harrison Memorial Library and the Church in the Round. She was co-chairman of the Committee to Elect a Water Management District and is presently a director of the Carmel Citizens Committee. She is a member of the Sierra Club and Audubon Society. Her work experience includes the fields of journalism, recreation and library.

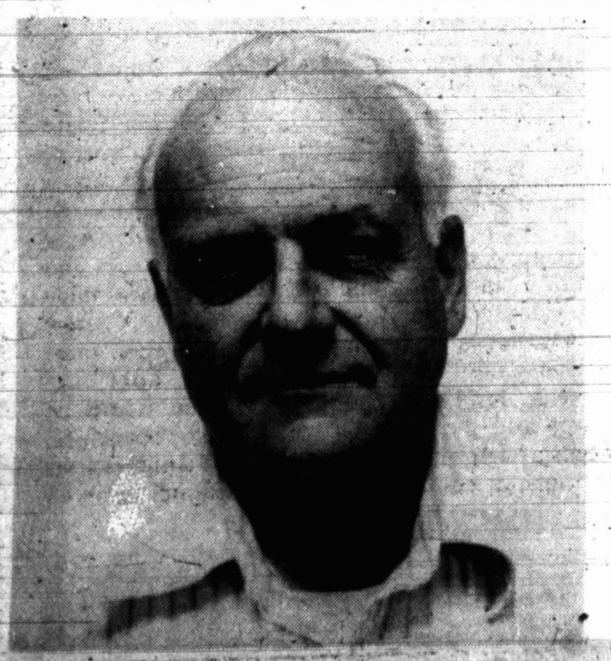
It depends. If after a legitimate effort to sell, or otherwise dispose of wastewater, and if we cannot get mitigation of the summer discharge ban, then it might be time to study removal of the ASBS. In any case the bay should continue to be carefully monitored. Anything which protects the bay in any way is beneficial, but it would be most unfortunate for this designation alone to block a reclamation program.



Kenneth McGinnis

Kenneth McGinnis is seeking re-election to the sanitary district board. He is now board president. McGinnis moved here from Pasadena in 1969. He has degrees and credentials from Occidental, UCLA and USC. He taught U.S. government and history at the secondary and community college levels. He has been a past president of the Carmel Area Coalition and the Rancho Rio Vista Property Owners Association. He is a member of the Carmel Citizens Committee, Carmel Valley Property Owners Association, the Sierra Club and the Audubon Society.

The Carmel Sanitary District can operate comfortably within the restriction of the ASBS designation. Three years of monitoring by water indicate no significant changes in marine life near the outfall. But what about long-range changes—50, 100 years. Or if the volume of sewage becomes eight million gallons per day instead of two? Conservationists and business people (often the same) share the same objective—a strong and reasonable protection of the environment. It's good economics. Who vacations in South San Francisco? The real and present value of the ASBS is financial. The state mandates that sewage effluent be removed from Carmel Bay during the dry summer months. That act makes the district eligible to receive grants to reclaim water for use on golf courses. State and federal aid amount to 85-87½ percent of the total cost, besides saving Cal-Am water for domestic use. No ASBS, no state or federal aid, no conservation.



Ted Weller

Ted Weller, 52, is seeking his third term as a director of the Carmel Sanitary District. He is a 1951 graduate of the University of California at Berkeley with a B.S. degree in public health sanitation. He is a professional engineer (safety) and a registered sanitarian. He also has a vocational teaching credential. Weller is a safety and sanitation engineer for the Wine Institute of California. He consults with wineries in problems relating to all phases of environmental subjects. His work brings him into contact with six of the nine regional water quality control boards and the state Water Quality Control Board.

No. This specific designation was one of 34 areas selected as special by the state of California. It is interesting to note that only Carmel Bay was singled out for additional hearings in that it was at the time of designation and still is considered as marginal in requiring such a classification. During the past seven years that the Carmel Sanitary District has been discharging into the bay with the secondary treated effluent the monitoring conducted by both the district and other agencies has not shown any harmful effects to the marine line. In some instances there has been a growth of various marine organisms which feed on those small elements which are developed from sewage treatment. The Carmel Sanitary District has been able to meet the Waste Water Discharge Requirements on a regular basis and in most cases has exceeded all standards with removals in the 95 to 98 percent range vs. the requirements of 85 percent range which is required by the state.

the sanitary district board

The Carmel River aquifer is threatened by contamination from septic tank effluent. Is the solution: (a) slow growth; (b) construct sewerlines throughout Carmel Valley; (c) it's nothing to worry about, we should annex and operate package plants.	Is wastewater reclamation the best answer to the limitation on effluent discharge into Carmel Bay? What about the costs?	Does the sanitary district have a role in controlling growth?
The qustion posed regarding the possibility of the Carmel Valley aquifer being threatened by septic tank contamination is one which cannot be answered in the space allotted here. There are several alternatives which seem to me worthy of our consideration. 1. The Carmel Sanitary District may annex any geographical area proposed by the Master Plan and economically operate and maintain these on-site wastewater management zones. 2. The Carmel Santiary District may construct sewer lines throughout the Carmel Valley—but at an estimated cost of approximately $50 to $60 million at the expense of the taxpayers of the Carmel Valley. This latter alternative would insure that the residents of the entire Monterey Peninsula served by the Carmel Valley aquifer would have uncontaminated potable water for future generations. Other problems associated with the removal of restrictions placed on the outfall would have to be addressed should the Carmel Sanitary District handle this increased sewering service. Other alternatives need to be discussed in depth to more fully cover the pending question.	It appears to me that in our present climate of fiscal irresponsibility in bureaucratic government, both state and national in scope, the taxpayers of our district have indicated with abundant clarity that there comes a time for the need to stop this ever-increasing spending. Let us look more diligently into viable alternatives in light of the mandate for decreased spending from the taxpayers. Let us consider the savings in dollars if the Area of Special Biological Significance designation were to be lifted by the state. Let us further consider the fact that if this ASBS were removed, reclamation would not have to be abandoned. The highly treated effluent could periodically be diverted to the golf courses as needed. The present outfall could discharge the present or even increased demands of our enlarged service area without prohibitive additional costs involved. There would consequently be hundreds of additional acre feet of potable water added to our present dwindling supply at a savings to the taxpayers of millions of dollars.	If it is in any way being so used, I consider it a misuse.
Before this can be really answered there should be monitoring by observation wells. This is a job for the water management district, who are considering a program of shallow wells (shallow, because leach fields encroach at the top layer of the aquifer). If it is shown that the aquifer is being contaminated, then (b) would probably be the best solution. It is a complex question which has ramifications other than environmental. Please remember we are a service agency only and should not be used to control growth. Costs and utility will be important considerations.	Probably yes—because of the 87 percent grant possibility. Golf is important to the Peninsula. We have a disposal problem—the courses need water. Thus, if a reclamation program can be worked out, we will be getting a double benefit. Forty million gallons a month of potable water are involved.	Absolutely not. Planning and planning decisions should be made by the appropriate agencies before any actions which the board may take could affect growth. Again, ours is a service agency, only.
Please allow me to evaluate each alternative in this answer: a) Certainly slower growth through administration of zoning and permit processes—always in the general welfare—is the best and cheapest way to go: less sewage, fewer problems. Septic tanks are considered quite safe by health authorities up to a point. b) With accelerated growth, sewer lines throughout Carmel Valley will be the best alternative but probably financially prohibitive. c) There is plenty to worry about. The proliferation of small package sewer plants in Carmel Valley could be an administrative and service nightmare. The Board of Supervisors indicates that if CSD refuses to operate these facilities, some other governmental entity will—public works or water management agency—neither of which have the facilities nor the desire to do the job. Thus Carmel Sanitary District, the only qualified agency, is being pushed into a corner.	New West Magazine, Sept. 10, 1979, states: "Today we are facing a crisis in our supply of water that is potentially far more devastating than the current energy crisis or the last drought." The article predicts a chronic water shortage in California by the year 2000. Reclamation technology is proven. The golf courses need the reclaimed water, saving "new" water for home and commercial use, mitigating future droughts. But we must start soon. Costs: total estimated at $13-$14 million, including $4 to $5 million to upgrade the plant (which we have to do anyway), the rest for land disposal-reclamation. The local share, 12½ to 15 percent, maybe $1.4 million, will be spread over a considerable period and a growing population. The district will sell the reclaimed water, and hopefully acquire some permanent open space as a bonus. A real bargain!	Under law special districts are created to perform specialized functions. Sanitary districts are formed to treat and dispose of sewage. In contrast, a municipality, such as Petaluma, which operates its own sanitary facilities, may limit its scope and type of development through its broader powers—such as zones of influence—accorded incorporated cities. A local sanitary district may control growth only through the limit of its capacity to treat effluent. It may refuse to accept any more sewage or annexations simply because it cannot handle the load. Thus the secondary effect of such a decision would be to limit growth, but a strictly temporary constraint. Sanitary districts are not in the land-use planning business. That is the job of the county supervisors.
This statement does not tell the entire story in that the water supply that is taken from the river is from deep sources ranging from 75 to 135 feet. Effluent from septic tanks that would enter the river aquifer are from those individual sources that are failing and would have to be probably within 100 feet of the river itself. It would be necessary for this material to penetrate through the soil mantle which in itself acts as a filter and due to anaerobic decomposition along with take up of most elements would provide adequate cleaning of the effluent prior to actual entry to the aquifer. In order to correct the proposed problem I feel that the logical solution would be for the Carmel Sanitary District to proceed on the annexation of the entire Carmel River Watershed up to and including the Camp Stephanie area. As it becomes feasible, then a trunk line should be installed within the valley floor to collect the influent from feeder lines to the respective developed areas as necessary.	No. The best and most logical answer is to eliminate as much of the influent which arrives at the treatment as possible. During the drought years the flow to the plant dropped by about one million gallons (normal flow today is 2.2 million gallons per day). Part of this was caused by the water conservation that was practiced by the local residents, but a major factor was that the level of the ground water within the system had fallen below the level of most of the existing collection sewer lines and thereby prevented infiltration. I would favor an extensive program for the upgrading and repair of the older section of the 50 plus year system (i.e., Carmel Woods area, etc.) in order to eliminate this excessive infiltration. It is possible that as much as 500,000 gallons a day could be prevented from entering the system and then require treatment and disposal of what could be called clean water. Reclamation as a whole is excellent and should be considered in its correct and logical context, but I do not feel that the expenditure of the large sums of funds as proposed by the Early Start Reclamation Project is justified at this time.	No. Unfortunately the district is being forced into this position of being the so-called lead agency in controlling growth because of the limitations which have been placed upon it by the state Water Quality Control Board with discharge limitations; (i.e., 2.4 million gallons of effluent per day). Because of this order (1975) it has become necessary to cease any annexations of adjacent properties which probably need to be served. I feel that it is the responsibility of the Board of Supervisors and the county Planning Commission only to determine what growth will take place in an area. The Carmel Sanitary District is a service agency and as such must provide adequate service to its area after the developments have been approved by the Board of Supervisors and the planning commission. Therefore, if growth is a factor it can be controlled at a higher level of governmental control than by the Carmel Sanitary District.

these amendments, LAFCO approved the annexation, allowing it to go forward to the protest hearings before the city.

FOLLOWING THE city protest hearing, which resulted in placing the annexation issue before the electorate in November, the Local Agency Formation Commission adopted the following Impartial Analysis as provided for by law:

This annexation, if approved by the voters, would transfer the governing and policy-making functions and certain service responsibilities from county government to city. The following is information regarding the proposal.

Acreage: 396.3 + acres

Voters: 1,555 (March 26, 1979)

Boundaries: North: Carmel Woods Subdivision rear lot lines. East: Western right-of-way of U.S. Highway 1. South: Oliver and Rio Roads. West: City of Carmel-by-the-Sea's existing corporate limits.

Natural/Manmade Boundaries: North: Pescadero Canyon acts as a scenic and negative easement with restricted land use. East: Highway 1 acts as a separating barrier.

Planning/Land Use: primarily fully developed single family residential. Upon annexation the county would no longer be responsible for land use control or regulations. The city would assume this role.

Sanitation: Carmel Sanitary District presently serves the incorporated and unincorporated areas in question. No district boundary change will occur upon annexation.

Refuse: under the city's franchise, the collection rates will slightly decrease after annexation.

Public Works: responsibility for road maintenance, street sweeping, drainage and improvements, pavement resurfacing, traffic, engineering, etc. ... will be transferred to the city from the county.

Water: water services will not be affected.

Schools: school boundaries and services will not be affected.

Fire: presently provided for by County Service Area (CSA) 43 which contracts with the state Division of Forestry. Annexation would result in automatic exclusion of the area from CSA 43. Contractual, mutual or automatic aid agreements can be negotiated between CSA 43 and Carmel for additional services.

Police: the County Sheriff patrols the unincorporated areas. Upon annexation, the Carmel Police Department will be responsible. A shorter response time from the city for emergency calls is anticipated.

Recreation/Parks: the city would become responsible for recreation facilities/parks. At present the Sunset Cultural Center is used by residents within the annexing area.

Library: the county contracts with the city for the provision of library services. Annexation would reduce the contractual agreement.

Postal Service: annexation will not alter service.

Fiscal Information: there will be no change in general property taxes as a result of annexation. They will remain at $4 per $100 of assessed valuation.

Negotiated Tax Transfer: upon annexation a negotiated agreement will be approved by the county Board of Supervisors and the City Council to assure an equitable transfer of revenue.

State in lieu Revenues: Each year cities receive in lieu revenue based on population from the state; $26 plus additional revenue per person per year is estimated.

Political Participation: upon annexation, residents will become eligible to vote in city elections and may run for city office. By participation in local and political activities the residents can help guide the future direction of their community.

The article on the impartial report on the annexation measure is by Michael Johnson, executive officer of the Local Agency Formation Commission.

SPONSORED BY: CONCERNED CITIZENS' COMMITTEE FOR RESPONSIBLE GOVERNMENT, CARMEL SANITARY DISTRICT, BEN HEINRICH, TREASURER

Measure B attempts to retain management law

Strong administrative form of government advocated

'Keep "Whim" and "Whimsy" out of city government'

WHIM AND WHIMSY have no place in government, whether national, state, county or city. Positive professional action, and effective departmental operation, free of political Whim, or individual Whimsy, is needed for smooth, effective operation.

Carmel can afford no less.

When a strong city administrator form of government was decided upon, and enacted, in 1977, long studies had been made to draft an ordinance that was to be the most effective method of managing our city's needs. The ordinance, No. 77-22, clearly defined the job and duties of city administrator, and the authorities which went with the responsibilities of the job. It was passed unanimously by the City Council, and an administrator was hired to put into action that which had been decided.

It was thought at the time that all Whim and Whimsy had been put away, and that the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea could go forth effectively with the ever-increasing demands of daily function.

THERE WAS NEVER any doubt or question that the policy-making power rested soley with the City Council—then or ever. It is the responsibility of the elected or appointed officials to set policy and to make the laws by which the city shall be governed.

Carmel is no longer a sleepy little town that can be managed by the occasional "get-together" or a few citizens who say "let's do this or that," and who sign the checks that the treasurer writes out. It has not been that kind of town for years, though we all work hard to keep that essence and that atmosphere.

When, this year, Whim and Whimsy again raised their heads, the residents of Carmel made their wishes well known. They did not want a return of personality antics in the day-to-day function of this city. They believed, and still do, that a man in a position of responsibility must have the full authority to carry out the job at hand. It is certainly not authority if he is the errand-boy of the City Council. Nor can city staff function efficiently if every member of the council can give orders directly to each person on staff. And it is not authority if the city administrator does not have the freedom to hire, fire and promote his own staff himself.

No one would run a business that way. No democracy runs a country that way. The board of directors of a business sets the policy for the corporation. The officers carry out that policy. Congress sets the laws of our land. They do not personally see to the carrying out of those laws.

IF THE CITY Council of Carmel does not like the way that its policies are being carried out, the council has the full power to fire the city administrator and to hire another, but it does not have the need, know-how, nor the physical time to control every action, day by day. It is a waste of time and efficiency. And the residents of Carmel have so spoken.

The Petition for Initiative was signed by 874 voters. That is a majority of the voters that have actually voted in any of our municipal elections. It is clear that they are in favor of efficient city functioning, and that Ordinance No. 77-22 provides that efficiency.

By voting yes when you are in the booth on Nov. 6, you can insure the continuation of our present city administrator form of city management. If any changes are needed or proposed, you, as Carmel residents, will be the ones to make that decision. By your own direct vote, you will be assured that any change will be at the people's level, not Whim or Whimsy.

THE COMMON SENSE Committee was organized by a group of residents who have decided that the time has come to restore old-fashioned common sense to the activities of our city government.

Isn't it common sense that Ordinance No. 77-22 should be made into law that can only be changed by a direct vote of the people?

Isn't it common sense to eliminate personalities and personal factions from the efficient management of the day-to-day function of the City of Carmel?

Isn't it common sense to take the case to the people in the form of the petition?

The response of the people's common sense was overwhelming. Even residents that agreed with the majority of the council in most matters signed the petition. A number of people who had not been registered, did so, saying that they wanted their voices heard, too! They all agreed that a city administrator must have the authority to do his job, without political tension or interference.

It is important that Ordinance No. 77-22 be made into law. If you have signed the petition, be certain that you vote yes. Even if you did not get a chance to sign the petition, be sure to vote yes on Nov. 6.

Every vote counts, and the only way that you can ensure that your voice will not cry in the wilderness again, is to vote for Ordinance No. 77-22, and you will then be assured of effective city functioning.

IT IS NOW BEING suggested that the City Council should "have the power to change the City Administrator Code to suit the personality of the administrator."

What better example of Whim/Whimsy, as opposed to common sense. Does a board of directors change the policy of the business to suit the personality of the executive officer?

Fortunately, city councils come and city councils go, but the structure and the operating needs of city government remain, and must be dealt with each and every day. For the efficient continuation of the management of the city of Carmel-by-the-Sea, it is only common sense to protect our city administrator ordinance, so that we can rest assured that Whim and Whimsy are definitely a thing of the past.

Vote yes on Ordinance No. 77-22 on Nov. 6!

This article for a yes vote on the city administrator initiative is by the Common Sense Committee. Members are Olof Dahlstrand, William Doolittle, Barnard Anderson, Frank Lloyd, Fred Keeble, Larry Morago, Claire Cross, Royal Adams and Robert Stephenson.

'Measure B would not give us workable government'

VOTERS WILL GO to the polls on Nov. 6 and be asked to vote whether or not City Ordinance No. 77-22 should be a final job description for the city of Carmel-by-the-Sea city administrator.

To date, the elected City Council has held the responsibility of uniting and re-evaluating the city administrator's job description and duties.

With passage of 77-22, by the electorate, no longer will the responsiblities be with the City Council, but rather the electorate.

Last week I received a phone call from a representative of the Carmel Pine Cone asking me to write the reasons why voters should vote against passage of Measure B. What follows are my thoughts on the history as well as the impact passage of Measure B would have.

Carmel-by-the-Sea is a General Law City which for years has functioned with a city administrator, not a city manager. Back in 1977 when the then-city administrator retired, the City Council decided to change the duties and responsibilities of the city administrator.

THE COUNCIL DELEGATED many of its own responsibilities and came close to creating a job description which was similar to a city manager's job description.

Because of Carmel's many unique qualities and problems, the council chose not to create a full city manager's job description. The title was retained as city administrator for one important reason: so that a future City Council could and would re-evaluate the newly created job description in approximately one year's time.

It was felt that the City Council had done its best to come up with a new job description for the city administrator, but refinements would probably be necessary. One year's time would allow for finding those refinements. But with the passage of time a new City Council found itself addressing numerous issues which took priority.

Well over a year, in fact almost two years, passed before the council looked once again at its job description for the city administrator. Personalities came into play and now voters find themselves voting on whether or not the original and experimental Ordinance No. 77-22 should be the final job description which would be acted upon by any City Council.

LIKE MOST ACTIONS in life, this ballot Measure B has positive and negative implications for the voters to consider.

While I have been asked by the Pine Cone to share some of the negative impacts Measure B will have, I do wish to take the liberty of sharing my belief that it does offer, from a positive perspective, the opportunty to relieve future councils of direct responsibility for the city administrator's job description if they so wish. It settles the question of what the job description will be unless residents want to change it.

What then, would make passage of Measure B a mistake? I offer some points for consideration.

It does not offer job security for the city administrator, as proponents claim. A future council may find that difficulties with a future city administrator could best be solved by simply terminating the person. Unable to re-evaluate the job description to fit the needs of Carmel, and rather than put the city through the exercise of voting on a change in the job description, those council members may find themselves confronted with the realization that the simplest and most expedient way to alleviate problems with the job description and the city administrator is to terminate the administrator. A most unfortunate set of choices.

A FURTHER POINT to be considered is the costliness of an election every time a change is to take place. The city would have to wait until an election was held. During that time, the community could find itself involved in an exercise of emotional and personality entanglement, while the substance of need for a revised job description ordinance was lost.

The daily affairs of running the city belong in the hands of a good city administrator. Elected and appointed officials are in the best position to know the performance of that person. By knowing how the daily affairs flow, by the feedback received from city employees, from conversations with residents and meeting with members of the business community, council members and appointed officials are best able to work with the city administrator.

Positive adjustments to the city administrator's duties and responsibilities are important responsibilities which should be addressed by officials of the city in as expedient a manner as possible. Forcing residents to have to get involved falls short of efficient performance.

If council members have failed with their responsibilities, then they should be replaced when they come up for election.

AS A FURTHER point, I would like to remind voters that, to the best of our knowledge, this would be the first time a California city ever enacted an ordinance like this.

Some members of the League of California Cities staff indicated to me that such an ordinance was not in the best interest of the city administrator, city staff, or the residents. The belief that no other city has such an ordinance, in this manner, is an obvious reason.

In closing, I would like to share my belief that Measure B is not unworkable. It has some good points. But when viewed overall, I believe it would best serve all concerned by not passing.

The article against Measure B was written by Councilman Mike Brown. Brown, Mayor Gunnar Norberg and Councilman Les Gross opposed the initiative that stipulated the city administrator ordinance can be changed or eliminated only by a direct vote of the people.

Dear Clark:

In reference to your question regarding fire insurance rates within the City of Carmel vs. adjacent to the City of Carmel, please be advised that all of my companies use the same base rate. This is because current fire protection reflects a difference of only 1 point on a scale of 1 to 10.

Currently all of our companies and most other companies combine Protection Class 4 and 5 in order to get their base rate. Therefore, annexation of adjacent neighborhoods into the City fire protection would result in no insurance cost differences for most residents.

	What can be done to preserve the quality of public education in the face of declining finances and dropping enrollment?	Do you support the voucher system th allow for the public financing of all including private institutions?
 Doyle Clayton Doyle Clayton is 35 years old, married and has two children attending Tularcitos and Middle schools. He was born in Carmel, attended Sunset School and Carmel High School. At Carmel High, Clayton was student body president and received the Blanket Award for outstanding athletic performance. He graduated with honors from Fresno State College with an M.A. in education. Clayton currently holds a general secondary teaching credential, counseling credential and a vocational teaching credential. His teaching experience includes Fresno State College, Mountain View, Seaside and Monterey high schools. At Monterey High, Clayton has served as a teacher, department chairman, curriculum council member, scholarship committee chairman, co-sponsor of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes Club and football coach for 10 years. As a counselor, he now specializes in college admissions and financial aid. Clayton worked for the Carmel Recreation Department as a swimming and diving instructor. He is a member of the Carmel Presbyterian Church.	The best way to preserve quality programs in the face of declining finances is to make certain that every dollar is spent in a way that produces the most instruction for the most students. Money should be spent on children first and on programs that deal directly with students. I do not believe that spending $10,000 to find an employee is the best way to use taxpayers' money. Proposition 13 had a strong message, but I do not feel that some people heard what was said. The public does not want to cut good programs, but wants to cut the "fat" from all government services. We have little control over the general decline of enrollment. But we can have an effect upon the number of students leaving our school system to enter private schools. We must improve the quality of our programs and support a strong discipline policy to eliminate classroom and campus disturbances.	No! The voucher system will not guarantee p right to send their children wherever they ch voucher system will be very expensive and wil even larger state bureaucracy to certify and m the schools in the program. The voucher init give Sacramento more control over local edu To replace our present system without first t evaluating the new voucher system is a v business practice. I do not want my children experimental project for a few bureau Sacramento. But there is a message behind this initiative, a schools must listen! There are many dissatisfie who want to choose their child's school on th merit and performance. We must critically an system and make those changes that will ensur Carmel Unified School District is where paren to send their children.
 George Kew George Kew is a retired Marine Corps officer and practicing attorney. He has a 7-year-old daughter in the second grade at River School. His other six children have completed college. Kew has had considerable experience in budgeting and money management for large organizations, including management of research and development projects.	The quality of public education has come under criticism from many quarters. In an attempt to corral the phrase "quality of education" I will define it as that education which enables a graduating student to function as a literate adult in our complex society. In short, such a student can read, write and figure, and is thus enabled to continue a life-long learning adventure. Some parents believe that the quality of public education is so diluted that they have placed their children in private schools. Some of these parents are teachers in our public schools and therefore have special knowledge of the quality of public education. Where quality is in question, I believe it is because the role of the school system has become corrupted by the community and legislature. Educators have been required or enticed to become baby sitters, wardens, social engineers, entertainment specialists and incidentally, teachers. I believe teachers should be allowed (and required) to teach. Further, they should be provided a teaching environment free from disruption by those not willing to learn.	The voucher system proposal is a reaction to a decline in the quality of education. As written support it because it introduces more problem solves. It is a viable option if the public e system does not improve.
Ronald Parravano Ronald Parravano, 31, is an attorney. He is a native of California and resides in Carmel with his wife, Kari, and their two children, who attend Carmel Woods School. Parravano earned his juris doctorate at Loyola University School of Law in Los Angeles. He also earned B.A. and M.A. degrees, both in history, at Loyola. Prior to entering his legal career, Parravano worked as a social studies and English teacher for a Southern California high school for seven years. He is currently a law instructor at Golden Gate University and Monterey College of Law. His community activities include the following: chairman of the Woods School Site Council; member of the Woods School Parents Club playground committee; member of the District Elementary Proficiency Standards Committee for Budget Reductions; co-chairperson of the 1979 Citizens Advicory Committee for Budget Reductions.	Despite the current financial hardships facing our district, a sound quality education can be assured so long as the governing board recognizes classroom education as a number one priority. It must be the firm resolve of our community to resist mediocrity in education. It is important to maintain local control of our schools despite the ever-increasing amount of state funding received. The board must actively seek alternative funding from private sources so that education and the choice to maintain academic excellence is not dependent on the amount of money Sacramento is willing to provide the district. One certain way to provide a quality education is to continue to draw to the district an exceptional teaching and classified staff. Their needs in terms of both morale and financial must be reasonably met. Finally, a strong system of Carmel schools will hopefully dissuade parents from placing their children in private schools. This will partially stem the tide of decreasing enrollment which is otherwise caused by a declining birthrate.	The Coons-Sugarman Initiative or the so-called plan is ambiguous and would do nothing to p public education. It is an experiment with our children in this state that could be a disaster. In so many words the voucher plan would g money to parents in the form of a voucher to be a voucher school of their choice. Translated, thi the use of public money to finance private alt schools. However, each of these schools would licensing by the state. Obviously, a huge bureaucracy involving enormous costs would ha created to license such schools. Furthermo supported school busing would be guaranteed to these alternative schools. The two most dramatic effects upon public ed that could be caused by the voucher plan would the further loss of revenue in a time when public are already beset by financial woes. Second initiative poses a direct takeover of local au vested in locally elected school boards.
Barbara Sanford Barbara Sanford has lived in Carmel for 21 years. Her children have always attended public schools. Two of them are students at Carmel High School. The family owns the Brass Rubbing Centre in Carmel. She is a graduate of Stanford University, with a major in U.S. history and economics. She also did graduate work in education. Sanford has served as co-chairman of Budget Reduction Advisory Committee and CHS School Site Council, and co-president of Padre Parents and president of Middle School Parents Club and on advisory and curriculum committees. She has done volunteer work for Cancer, Heart and Red Cross drives, Carmel Little League and AFS. She is a member of St. Dunstan's Church, Carmel Business Association, Rancho Rio Vista Property Owners Association, Carmel Valley Racquet Club, and Stanford Alumni Association.	Declining finances should help us to zero in on priorities to determine where the monies available will be spent. The decrease in enrollment might not have occurred had the public been informed last spring that a six period day would be a available at the high school. Our district lost $170,000. With small classes at CHS, the six period day should be reinstated by mid-year at Middle School. Serrano-Priest funds level out in September, 1980. In 1966-67 our school population totalled 2,846 for eight schools. We only had four district-wide administrators, a principal, one vice-principal each at CHS and CMS and two and one counselors, respectively, at each school. Today with less students (2,680) and one less school, our total administrative staff exceeds 24. Can we afford this?	I believe that the public school system should w every child, and thus there is no need for a v system. School boards have to be more respon community requests for excellence in educatio voucher initiative would not have arisen had the schools been meeting this need. The l will create an nd monitor all initiative will education. rst testing and a very poor dren to be an ıreaucrats in ve, and public tisfied parents n the basis of y analyze our nsure that the arents choose	I do not believe you can ever place enough emphasis on basic skills. The basic skills of reading, mathematics and written communications are the most important part of a school curriculum. I believe that after the three basic skills are mastered by all students, then careful consideration must be given to those additional skills that would be most beneficial for each individual student. I believe all students who have the desire, discipline, and necessary skills should be encouraged to attend college. For those students choosing to terminate their education after high school, we must offer strong vocational programs so that students are qualified to enter the labor market. I am not in favor of advancing students who have not mastered the basic skills at each grade level. Placing emphasis on basic skills is not enough. We must test to determine if the basics are actually being learned and retained.	I believe we can reduce the district level administrative staff by one position. I am also against the use of district vehicles for personal transportation to and from work. We need to investigate the possible uses of revenue from the sale or lease of unused district properties. Cleaning classrooms on a nightly basis could be reduced to an every-other-night cleaning schedule. The transportation costs are high in this district because of our large geographical boundaries. Whom we transport and for what reasons must be carefully analyzed to assure that the money is being spent in the best interest of the most students.	I feel I am qualified to serve on the school board because I am a concerned parent of two children in the district. I have been an educator for 14 years, and I am enthusiastic about quality education. As a parent, I am concerned that my children, as well as all children in the district, receive the best possible education. I am not convinced that the money available to this district is always spent in the best interest of students. As an educator, I have taught at three high schools and Fresno State College. Along with teaching, coaching and counseling, I have worked with school finances, school purchasing, curriculum development, discipline and school maintenance. A board member must be available to students, parents and school personnel and must be up to date on the needs of students. I feel I meet these qualifications.
to a perceived itten I do not blems than it lic education	The curriculum and standards committees are upgrading the curriculum. These committees are a form of insurance against loss of teaching of the basics. These basics should be immune from budget cuts. In time of severe shortage, all activities not directly related to basic education should be reviewed, arrayed in priority and funded only with residual funds. Concurrently, under such severe conditions, recall movements for irresponsible legislators would be in order.	With limited funds the balance must be struck in favor of basics. Unfortunately, because of the legislature's bias against school districts such as ours, the shortage of funds will persist at such a low level that only continuing review of all cost incurring decisions will permit the quality of education to be maintained. Under some funding levels it cannot be maintained.	I am qualified to serve as a school board trustee by virtue of my problem solving training and experience, my interest in the welfare of students and a heritage of public service. I am willing to devote the time and energy necessary to preserve and enhance the Carmel Unified School District.
lled voucher to promote our school r. ıld give tax o be used in , this means alternative ould require huge state d have to be rmore, tax d to each of c education ould first be blic schools ondly, the l authority	Since my two children attend Woods Elementary School, I can say with direct knowledge that the basics of education—the three Rs—are being taught there. Woods School is an outstanding learning institution. Education in California is reversing itself from the experiments, trends and philosophies of the early 1970s. Those deviations from fundamental education failed—some miserably, as evidenced by lawsuits filed by illiterate graduates against school districts. I don't believe these serious deficiencies exist here. The Carmel school district is by and large a very good one. While I accept the fact that we produce literate students, we must continue to improve our methods of emphasis of those basics. Our complex society demands greater verbal, reading and math skills than ever before. Our students must leave the system with the ability to communicate in a grammatical, coherent and concise fashion.	Having been a member of two budget reduction committees for the district, I can say that if further cuts are necessary, the choice of priorities will not be simple. The basic education program of grades K-12 must be given top priority. All available funds must first be used to preserve and foster academic excellence. This includes maintaining at least current classroom education expenditures and avoiding layoffs of staff; a workable teacher-student ratio should be maintained. Home-to-school transportation also deserves a high priority. Our district is geographically very large. There is no other adequate alternative to the school bus to ensure that all students attend classes. Yet I would insist on the efficient use of those buses. Furthermore, all reasonable alternatives to funding the district's expense should be carefully explored. Further cuts if necessary would have to come from the co-curricular and extra curricular areas. Again alternative funding to save any program should be sought. Such cuts should be fair and consider the number of students served.	My qualifications to deal with the problems I have discussed rest primarily in two areas. First, as one with teaching experience I understand the problems as they affect the classroom. Secondly, having been involved in various and extensive committee work for the district, I am familiar with its personnel and procedures. I also have first-hand knowledge of both academic and budgetary problems. My training and experience as an attorney will assist me in dealing with the legal questions and problems facing our district. As a parent of school children, my support for quality public education will influence any course of action I would pursue. As a result I feel I can bring good creative ideas to our district and help it to survive with strength problems at hand.
d work for a voucher sponsive to ation. The the public prove, and meet the s, we must priority.	My goal is to teach students the basic skills in K-3 grades whenever possible, and then encourage them to use these skills to have as many different educational experiences as possible. Parents, encouraged by Betty Bell, have demanded improvement of the curriculum at each school site, and the curriculum has greatly improved. We also now have accountability built in for both the student and teachers. A well-rounded curriculum should be provided for each student. When students graduate from Carmel High School, well educated, they will be accepted at the college of their choice, or be able to compete favorably in the job market.	We must protect academic program K-12. Hew more closely to the student-teacher ratio as negotiated. Suggest board begin with zero budget, and examine each and every program carefully to ensure productivity on the part of the student. Each administrative position, as well as teaching job, must provide for the best possible education for the student. With declining enrollments, our administrative staff could be reduced. One board member has procrastinated for 11 years on rehabilitating the high school. Our only option now is to consider the sale of the four parcels of excess land, which require tax payments each year, or at least part of them, to have funds for capital expenditures. Have administrators teach one class a day. Place teachers and administrators on proper schedules rather than the top, which costs us money. Consider reducing board and administrative travel expenses, donations to outside agencies, conferences, and anything not directly related to education.	I am qualified to sit on the school board because I am a proven problem solver. I put the interests of the students first. I have a positive approach to life, enthusiasm, energy, inquisitiveness, an open mind and willingness to listen and hear everyone who speaks. Problems can be solved. The confidence of this community can be restored by positive, not negative, approaches. My school background experience is widespread. My personal goal continues to be improving the quality of education for all students. I believe we live in a beautiful community, and care very much that we give our students the best educational opportunity possible for their future ambitions. Carmel needs a new, innovative, positive-acting school board, whose members first and foremost are interested in working together to improve the educational system. Please vote on Nov. 6—your vote counts!

Meet the candidates for

Ken White

Ken White is director of athletics at Monterey High School, a post he assumed 10 years ago. He has been employed as a teacher at Monterey High School for the past 20 years. For 10 years he was the supervisor of summer recreation swimming programs in Carmel Valley and Carmel. White, 45, and his wife, Jean, have two children, both students at Carmel Middle School. White's community involvement includes past deacon of Carmel Presbyterian Church, past director of the Carmel Chapter of the American Red Cross, past president of the Carmel Youth Baseball and retired volunteer fireman for Carmel Highlands Fire Department. White also helped to initiate Carmel Youth Soccer and he was a member of the Carmel school district curriculum committee.

Do you believe the district is placing enough emphasis on the basics?

No. One of my main priorities is to raise the level of our district's expectations of students in the areas of reading, written composition and spelling. I would like to see minimum proficiency standards and testing set for each grade. Those students not performing up to grade level would qualify for remedial tutoring.

Along with the proficiency testing we should work toward a volunteer tutorial program after school using our school facilities. We have many retired teachers and talented parents who reside in our district that might be willing to help our students.

Do you support the voucher system that would allow for the public financing of all schools, including private institutions?

The voucher system that will appear on the ballot next June is hastily written and poorly constructed. The proposed system makes costly guarantees, but it allocates no funds to carry them out. It guarantees busing for students to attend the school of their choice, but provides no funds for support of busing.

What bothers me most is that a new state bureaucracy must be established to control voucher funds, if this bill passes.

I belive the voucher system will dismantle the public education system in California.

Another important fact that all communities should be aware of is that by accepting state funds, a community must also accept state control. The voucher system is a form of state funds. Thus, less local control over our children's education. I believe it is important to keep local control over our schools.

If additional budget cuts had to be made, what are your suggested priorities?

I don't want to talk about additional budget cuts until I see if our district is taking advantage of all possible funds available. For example: a new state law changes the situation on school bus transportation funding. I also would like to take a good look at the central office administration and how its respective responsibilities are divided. In a school district our size with decreasing enrollment and money, further cuts may have to be made there.

Sale of property that our school district owns should be looked at in terms of funding.

We need to improve our product to the point that Carmel schools remain the best possible place to receive an education. If we can get this feeling, our average daily attendance will improve, thus bringing more funds into the district.

What can be done to preserve the quality of public education in the face of declining finances and dropping enrollment?

Families across the United States face this same problem. Less money means setting priorities and spending the money wisely in order to survive. My priorities are first the students in the classroom and their everyday process of learning. Secondly, providing necessary supplies to get a quality job done. Thirdly, to improve our product so that Carmel schools maintain their reputation as a "quality school district" that provides a solid education.

In order to accomplish these goals we need to maintain a quality teaching staff and we must have a board that supports them. We must do everything we can to let our state Legislators know that our Carmel school district is large in land mass and small in enrollment. This combination creates an enormous transportation bill.

We cannot allow our educational standards to lower because we face a "hard times budget."

Why do you think you are qualified to help resolve these questions?

I have lived in Carmel 20 years and presently have two students attending Carmel Middle School. Since 1959 I have had an opportunity to be involved in our community as a volunteer fireman (Carmel Highlands); member of the Carmel Red Cross board; a coach and president of the Carmel Youth Baseball board, and helping organize the Carmel Youth Soccer League.

As director of athletics, I daily solve problems concerning students, teachers and parents. My background is education and from my experiences at all levels I believe I am a very knowledgeable candidate for the Carmel school board.

Elect — DOYLE CLAYTON

"I would like to share in the planning and shaping of our school system. As a parent of children at Tularcitos and Middle School, I am dedicated to providing a quality educational system that is stimulating and challenging to all our students. As a board member, I will listen to students, parents, teachers and school officials. The activities that deal directly with students will always receive my highest priority in the budget.

Sincerely, Doyle Clayton

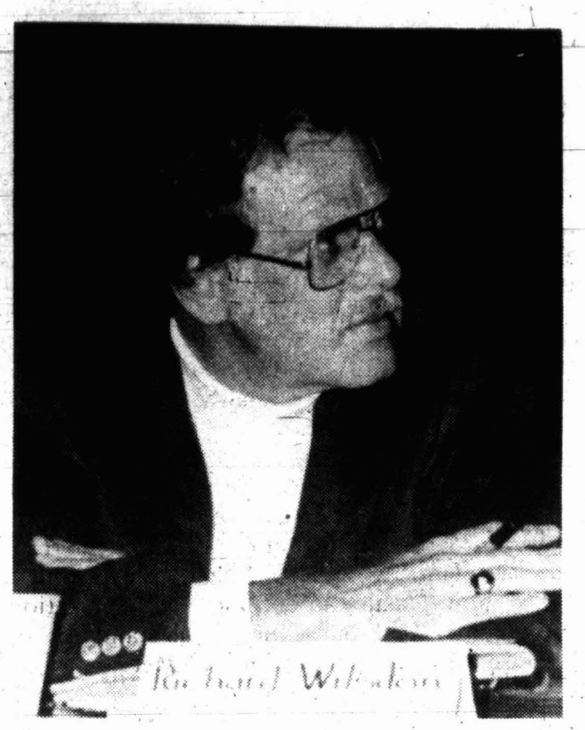
PAID FOR BY THE COMMITTEE TO ELECT DOYLE CLAYTON, 700 CASS ST., MONTEREY • BRECK TOSTEVIN, TREASURER

the Carmel school board



Richard Wilsdon

Richard Wilsdon, an attorney in Carmel since 1961, has served on the board of education of the Carmel Unified School District for the past 12 years. During his years as a board member, he has been active in the statewide school boards association. Locally, he has served as president of the Carmel Business Association and is currently president of the Carmel Rotary Club. He has also served with the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association, Rancho Rio Vista Property Owners Association, High Meadow Terrace Community Association, Boy Scouts, Sierra Club and United Way. He is 45 and has three children.

What can be done to preserve the quality of public education in the face of declining finances and dropping enrollment?

At the local level, every effort must be made to reduce or eliminate any expenses which do not affect the program offered to the students so that the available funds can be used to at least maintain and hopefully strengthen the academic program. We must seek the assistance of the community through contributions of time, or money, or both. There are so many people in this community who can help as aides and by sharing the knowledge that they have. At the state level, we must continue to attempt to inform the Legislature of the financial plight of the school district in an effort to increase the level of funding available from the state, and to give us more flexibility in dealing with the problems presented.

Do you support the voucher system that would allow for the public financing of all schools, including private institutions?

No. The voucher system will destroy public education in this state and will result in a reduction of the quality of the education programs available to students. In addition, the voucher plan raises serious constitutional questions with regard to the separation of church and state.

Do you believe the district is placing enough emphasis on the basics?

Yes. The Carmel school district has always emphasized the "basics" and in recent years has continued to increase that emphasis. The results of the state tests in reading, writing and math, as well as the SAT scores, show that Carmel students do exceptionally well. A renewed effort to improve spelling needs to be made, however.

If additional budget cuts had to be made, what are your suggested priorities?

Due to recent legislation which permits a school district to charge for transportation without losing the 50 percent state reimbursement, the area of highest priority should be transportation. All other cuts will have to be, if necessary, by a careful review of every area of expenditure to determine what cuts will be the least disruptive of the program offered to the students. As 85 percent of the district's expenditures are for personnel, by necessity some additional cuts in personnel may have to be made.

Why do you think you are qualified to help resolve these questions?

The major qualification I have is my very extensive experience. I have been involved for the past 14½ years with the operation of the district. For the past 12½ years I have been a member of the board of trustees. I have been deeply involved on a statewide basis with school finance as a member first of the California School Boards Association's Committee on School Finance and later their School Finance Task Force to which I was just appointed. I have long been a member of the association's Delegate Assembly. Locally, I have served as president of the Monterey County School Boards Association and for 10 years I served as an officer and board member of the Lyceum.

My training and background as an attorney have frequently been of assistance to the district, particularly my background as an attorney with the California Legislature, where I worked on the California Education Code.

I know the district; I know its problems, and I have demonstrated that I have the time, the ability and the knowledge to help solve the problems faced by the district.

CHS senior step closer to winning $10,000 national scholarship

Mark J. Sanford has won the Century III Leaders Scholarship competition at Carmel High School.

The 17-year-old senior, son of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Sanford of Carmel, is now eligible to compete with other high school seniors throughout California for two $1,500 scholarships, two $500 scholarships, and also for a $10,000 national scholarship that will be awarded in a conference of state winners in historic Colonial Williamsburg, Va.

The Century III Leaders Scholarship competition emphasized the future concerns of America. Students were judged on the basis of their leadership abilities, community involvement and score on a current events examination.

To compete at the state level, Sanford must now write a brief projection outlining what he thinks is one of America's future challenges and how it should be met.

Runners-up in the competition at Carmel High School were Lynnie Kramer, 17, and Patrick Parrish, 17.

The two California winners will receive an all-expense-paid trip to Williamsburg, March 7-10, 1980, to participate in seminars on current issues.

MARK J. SANFORD, Carmel High School student, seems pleased to be a contender for the Century III Leaders Scholarships. Should he win one of the California scholarships, he can then compete for a $10,000 national scholarship that will be awarded in Williamsburg, Va.

Fire protection cost, efficiency main debate of annexation issue

WILL THE RESIDENTS of Carmel Woods and Hatton Fields pay more for fire protection if they annex to the city of Carmel?

That depends how the insurance rating for the Carmel Fire Department compares to the rating for County Service Area No. 43 (CSA) which provides fire protection to Carmel Woods and Hatton Fields.

The Carmel Fire Department is rated Class Five by the Insurance Services Office, while CSA 43 is rated Class Four.

According to Francis "Skip" Lloyd, chairman of Carmel Annexation Now, "The ratings of the Carmel Fire Department and Fire District 43 are so much alike that fire insurance premiums would remain the same after annexation."

He added that property taxes for residents will stay at $4 per $100 assessed valuation whether they remain in the unincorporated area or annex to the city. This uniform tax rate was established under Proposition 13.

"On the other hand," Lloyd said, "if Hatton Fields and Carmel Woods remain in the county, residents may be hit by service user fees." Lloyd claims that the city of Carmel will not impose user fees because it has $1,500,000 in "unencumbered" reserves.

INSURANCE AGENT DICK Livingstone confirmed that the insurance ratings for the two fire departments are close enough that "for all practical purposes, they're the same."

As the Hartford Insurance Company agent in Carmel, Livingstone said that most insurance companies lump together the ratings for Class One through Class Six when figuring premiums for homeowners insurance or straight fire insurance.

Col. E.P. "Step" Tyner, chairman of the Committee Against Annexation, said that his group never claimed that the rates would be higher if residents annexed.

"The whole issue is the quality of fire protection. A Class Five simply means that you're not getting as good a service as a Class Four," he said.

Tyner noted that the Carmel Fire Department is staffed almost completely by volunteer firemen, while District 43 is staffed by paid firemen who are trained and hired through the state Division of Forestry.

"Volunteers have to come from their homes to respond to a fire call; our men just slide down a pole," he said.

ALTHOUGH HE ADMITTED that annexation would not affect homeowner rates, Tyner said it could directly affect rates for businesses in Carmel.

"Annexation will double the size of the area of Carmel; it will be harder for their department to fight fires throughout the city. People are running the risk of rates going up for the whole commercial sector of the town," he said.

Livingstone agreed that commercial rates could be affected. If Carmel's Class Five rating is changed to Class Six, for example, it would mean a 13 percent increase in commercial fire rates, he said.

Although the Carmel Fire Department was recently reviewed after 20 years by the Insurance Services Office, Livingstone said: "It's not likely that its rating will go higher. Carmel's Class Five is already a little high." He noted that Pacific Grove is rated Class Four and Monterey a Class Three. Seaside is rated a Class Five.

Tyner emphasized that residents within CSA 43 have never complained about paying for "excellent" fire protection. He said, "Service charges mean nothing. We've always paid for our fire service through taxes. Taxes dropped after Proposition 13, so we'll have user fees.

"We did a survey and people want a paid, trained fire department, and they're willing to pay," he said.

The highest user fees would be $50 per home per year, according to Tyner, who is on the advisory committee for County Service Area No. 43.

Use permit sought to convert Jeffers' house into a museum

Application for a use permit to convert Robinson Jeffers' Tor House into a museum and study center is scheduled for a public hearing on Wednesday, Nov. 14, by the county Planning Commission.

David Hughes of the Robinson Jeffers Tor House Foundation in Carmel, filed the application for the use permit.

According to Hughes, the museum proposed for the poet's famous hand-built residence, located on Scenic Road and Ocean View Avenue, would be an "extremely restricted" use.

Hughes stated there will be "no picnicking, eating, or drinking; no picking of flowers or plants; no making of loud noises and no animals permitted."

It is not anticipated that there will be any "appreciable" increase in traffic or parking in the streets adjacent to Tor House, Hughes contends. He notes that no more than six persons will be allowed into the museum at any time. Its operation will be further limited to not more than 12 hours per week.

Though Jeffers, who built the home stone by stone with his own hands, might shudder at the prospect of such restrictions on his former residence, at least Hawk Tower will be open to the public, according to the application.

Farr fears logging operation would create traffic hazards for CV Road motorists

The danger to motorists from fully loaded logging trucks inching out onto Carmel Valley Road from the blind uphill intersection at San Carlos Road will be one of several traffic concerns considered by the Monterey County Planning Commission at its meeting Wednesday, Nov. 14.

The planners are scheduled to discuss a use permit application at 2 p.m. for the logging operation proposed by Westbrook Land and Timber Company of Smith River.

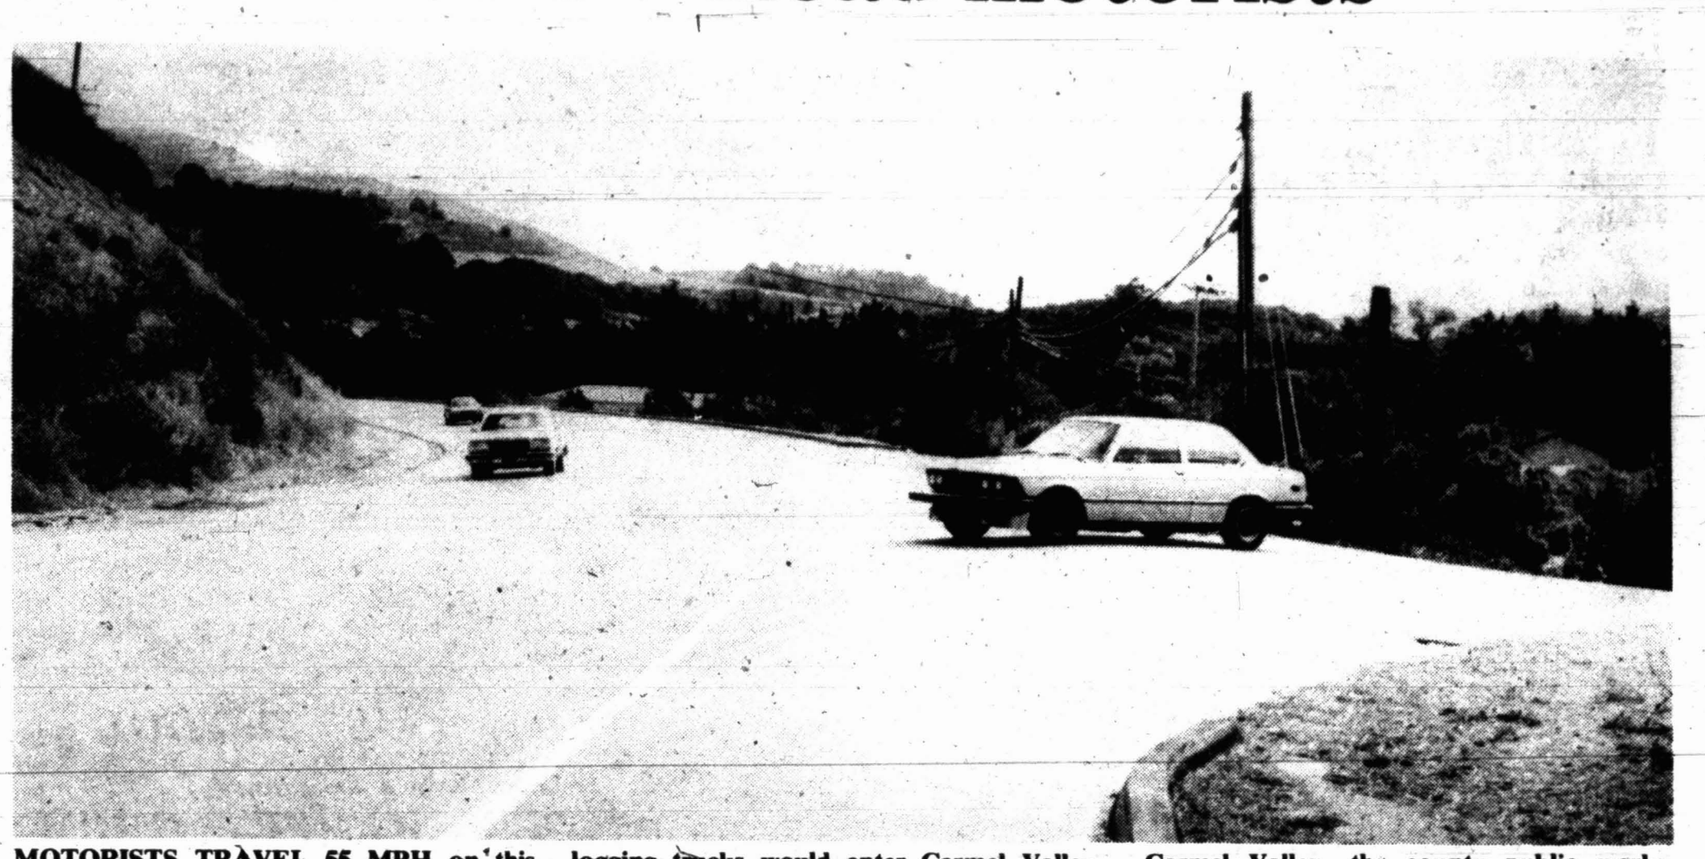
Hank Westbrook, owner of the timber company, wants to harvest 372 old-growth redwoods in the Williams Creek watershed south of Carmel Valley.

Trucks carrying loads up to 80,000 pounds will haul the logs out of Williams Canyon via San Carlos Road, according to the Environmental Impact Report prepared for the project.

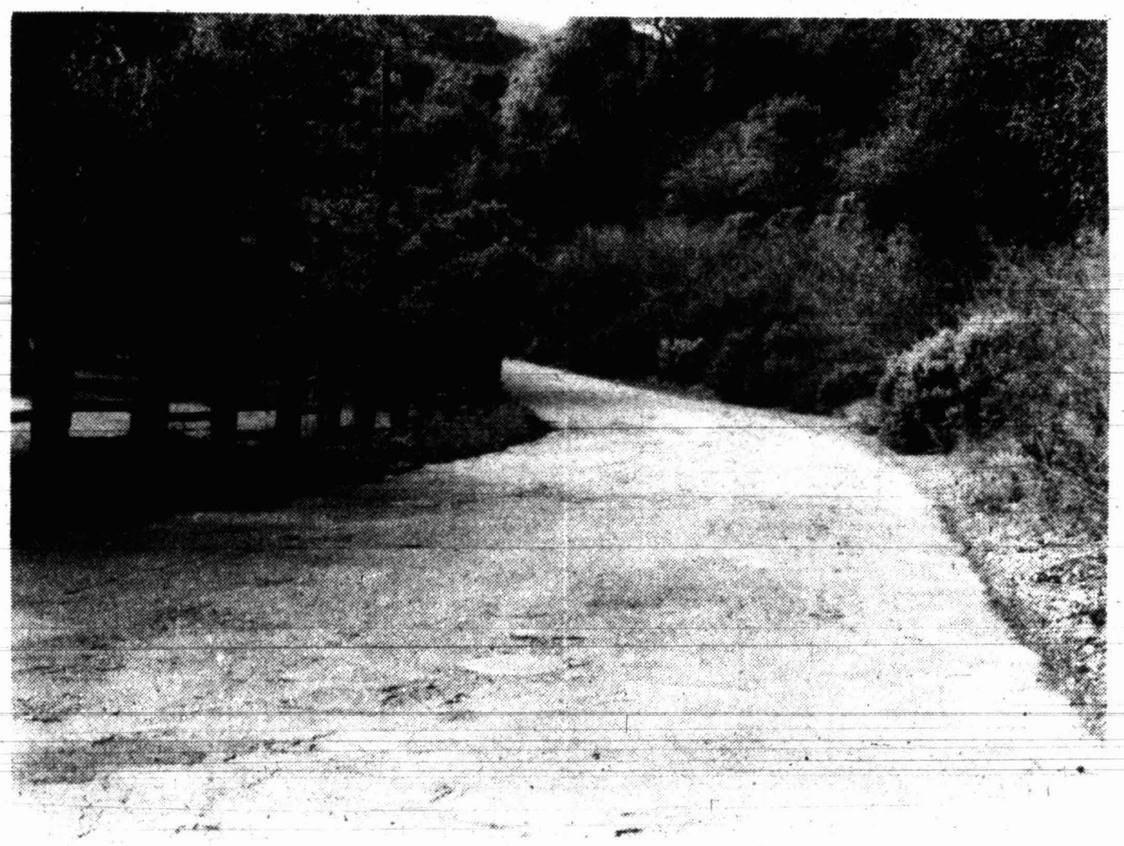
Turning left at Carmel Valley Road, the trucks will travel to Highway 1 and continue along that two-lane road over Carmel Hill, heading north toward a destination in Santa Cruz County, as outlined in the EIR.

The Board of Supervisors certified the EIR on Oct. 16 over the objections of Supervisor Sam Farr. He questioned whether it adequately addresses the traffic problems.

Farr asked how the logging trucks could be allowed on "that narrow dirt road (San Carlos Road)." He noted that the presence of loaded logging trucks pulling onto Carmel Valley Road is only one major traffic impact.



MOTORISTS TRAVEL 55 MPH on this curve along Carmel Valley Road where it is intersected by San Carlos Road (right). According to a timber harvest plan, loaded logging trucks would enter Carmel Valley Road from the blind, uphill approach off San Carlos Road. Because the intersection is already rated one of the most dangerous in Carmel Valley, the county public works department may require the timber company to pay for extensive improvements on the intersection. (Steve Hellman photo)



LOGGING TRUCKS WOULD travel over this section of San Carlos Road below the Carmel Valley Racquet Club. Most of the substandard road is covered with cracked pavement and subject to chuck holes. Besides the damage to the road, there is concern that the logging trucks would pose a danger to motorists because of many blind curves along the one-lane road. (Steve Hellman photo)

The EIR states that signs be posted to warn motorists of the merging trucks, but it was determined in the traffic study that motorists already ignore the posted speed limit along that stretch of road.

Bruce McClain, county public works director, said the county will have to attach conditions to the use permit to resolve the traffic problems. These could range from restriction to daytime operation during non-peak traffic hours to a requirement that the applicant rebuild sections of the roadway.

"We've issued permits in the past for trucking operations out of San Carlos Road, and had no accidents," McClain said. "But there's more traffic today. We could require the company to rebuild the intersection of Carmel Valley and San Carlos roads."

This condition, McClain admitted, would be a death-knell to the project because it is expected that Westbrook will receive no more than $600,000 revenue from the timber harvest.

The improvement of the intersection would include significant earth-moving to provide for the four-lane widening of Carmel Valley Road, realignment of San Carlos Road so that it would no longer make a blind uphill approach and possible channelization.

A similar but more extensive intersection improvement of Carmel Valley and Robinson Canyon roads will cost the developers of Carmel Valley Ranch $1 million.

The road problems associated with the timber project extend beyond Carmel Valley Road. The EIR notes that the seven-mile stretch of San Carlos Road from Carmel Valley Road to Williams Canyon is a one-lane, winding road with unpaved portions.

According to the EIR, the road crosses the north fork of San Jose Creek eight times in Williams Canyon before it reaches the private property inside Rancho San Carlos. From there the private road is paved to the gate at the floor of Carmel Valley and crosses a private bridge over the Carmel River before ending at Carmel Valley Road.

"The heavy weight of these trucks traveling over unimproved dirt roads and light-duty paved roads would result in deterioration. It is likely that this would include the formation of ruts, chuckholes and pavement cracking," the EIR states.

The private bridge over Carmel River was offered for dedication to Monterey County about 10 years ago, according to the EIR, but the offer was refused because of structural problems. "The load limit for the bridge is not known," the EIR states.

The county requested preparation of the EIR last year after opposition was expressed toward the project from the Lower Carmel Valley Advisory Committee, Carmel Valley Property Owners Association and Arthur C. Oppenheimer, owner of Rancho San Carlos. Their unanimous concern was over the potential traffic problem.

Opens gate to development of hotel, condominiums

Master plan restriction on Odello land lifted

By STEVE HELLMAN

THE MONTEREY COUNTY Planning Commission, in its final action last week on the revised Carmel Valley Master Plan, lifted a major restriction from the Odello property, but stopped short of removing the 25-unit-per-year limit on new developments.

By a 4-3 vote the commissioners removed the provision that required the Odello property, like other farmland, be kept in permanent agricultural open space. They also extended the Area of Development Concentration at the entrance of Carmel Valley to include the Odello property.

The ruling has the effect of freeing the 134 acres east of Highway 1 and south of the Carmel River for commercial development.

"AT LAST THEY showed us a little compassion," a jubilant Bruno Odello said. He had argued repeatedly for some relief to develop the land that is now taxed at $200 per acre.

Odello claimed that he could not afford to continue to farm the land because taxes on the property have risen so sharply in the past decade. Odello has proposed a plan to build a farmers market, 97 condominiums and a 200-unit hotel on land that now grows artichokes.

Voting to remove the major restrictions on the Odello property were commissioners Sherry Owen, Walter Basham, Marc Del Piero and Manuel Jimenez. The opposing votes were cast by commissioners Bill Peters, Gary Varga and Joseph Sullivan. Commissioners Peter Cailotto and Calvin Reaves were absent.

The ruling will be passed on with other recommended changes to the Board of Supervisors. The supervisors can alter the recommendation, although any changes they approve would require that the plan be returned to the planning commission for reconsideration.

County Senior Planner Dave Young said that it will be three weeks before the revised Master Plan is scheduled for public hearings before the supervisors.

DEL PIERO REQUESTED the change on the Odello property. His argument was that the Odellos are in the same predicament as other farms in Carmel Valley — it is no longer economically feasible to farm. He said he had talked with representatives of the Odello family, and it was agreed that immunity from the permanent open space provision was sufficient to protect their holdings.

Planning Director Ed DeMars reacted immediately, saying "You're effectively excluding the property from the Master Plan. Seems to me that's ... heavy."

Sullivan agreed, "In effect, you're excusing the Odello property from the plan. You're saying it will be developed according to its own plan."

Del Piero said that the property would be subject to all other provisions of the Master Plan. But he insisted it should retain its present zoning instead of being rezoned by the Master Plan.

"It gets too complicated," DeMars said. "It would be more direct to just exclude it from the plan."

But Del Piero said the property could not legally be excluded when it is surrounded by other property that will remain in the Master Plan.

"You're creating a monster," said Varga of the decision to also extend the Area of Development Concentration south to include Odello.

"You're jumping the Carmel River, running along Highway 1; you're creating a whole new city. It's too broad a brush stroke," he pleaded.

VARGA RECOMMENDED that a better solution would be to define the land in terms of what the Master Plan will allow for clustering of development on agricultural land.

(Odello's planned commercial development involves 20 of the 134 acres, with the remaining 114 acres kept in artichokes and riparian habitat.)

Peters agreed. "This undermines the rationale of limiting development of hotels at the mouth of the Valley. It's a disaster," he said.

But Del Piero argued that a hotel was a proper land use for the Odello property.

Odello told this reporter: 'We're being taxed as though the land is going to be developed, yet we could not develop it. Tax us for agricultural land or let us develop."

A CHANGE IS necessary to alleviate the restriction in the Master Plan that not more than 25 units per year can be allocated to any one development, Peters said.

This provision was recommended by the planning commission subcomittee that prepared the report. Varga headed the subcommittee and he explained: "A developer can propose 1,000 units. What we're saying, though, is we can only give him 25 a year."

Peters said that the most a developer could be assured is a 100-unit development. Approval of a tentative subdivision map is granted for not more than four years, he noted. He said that if the county was to approve a tentative map for more than 100 units, it is necessary that some framework be provided by the developer to plan the remaining units.

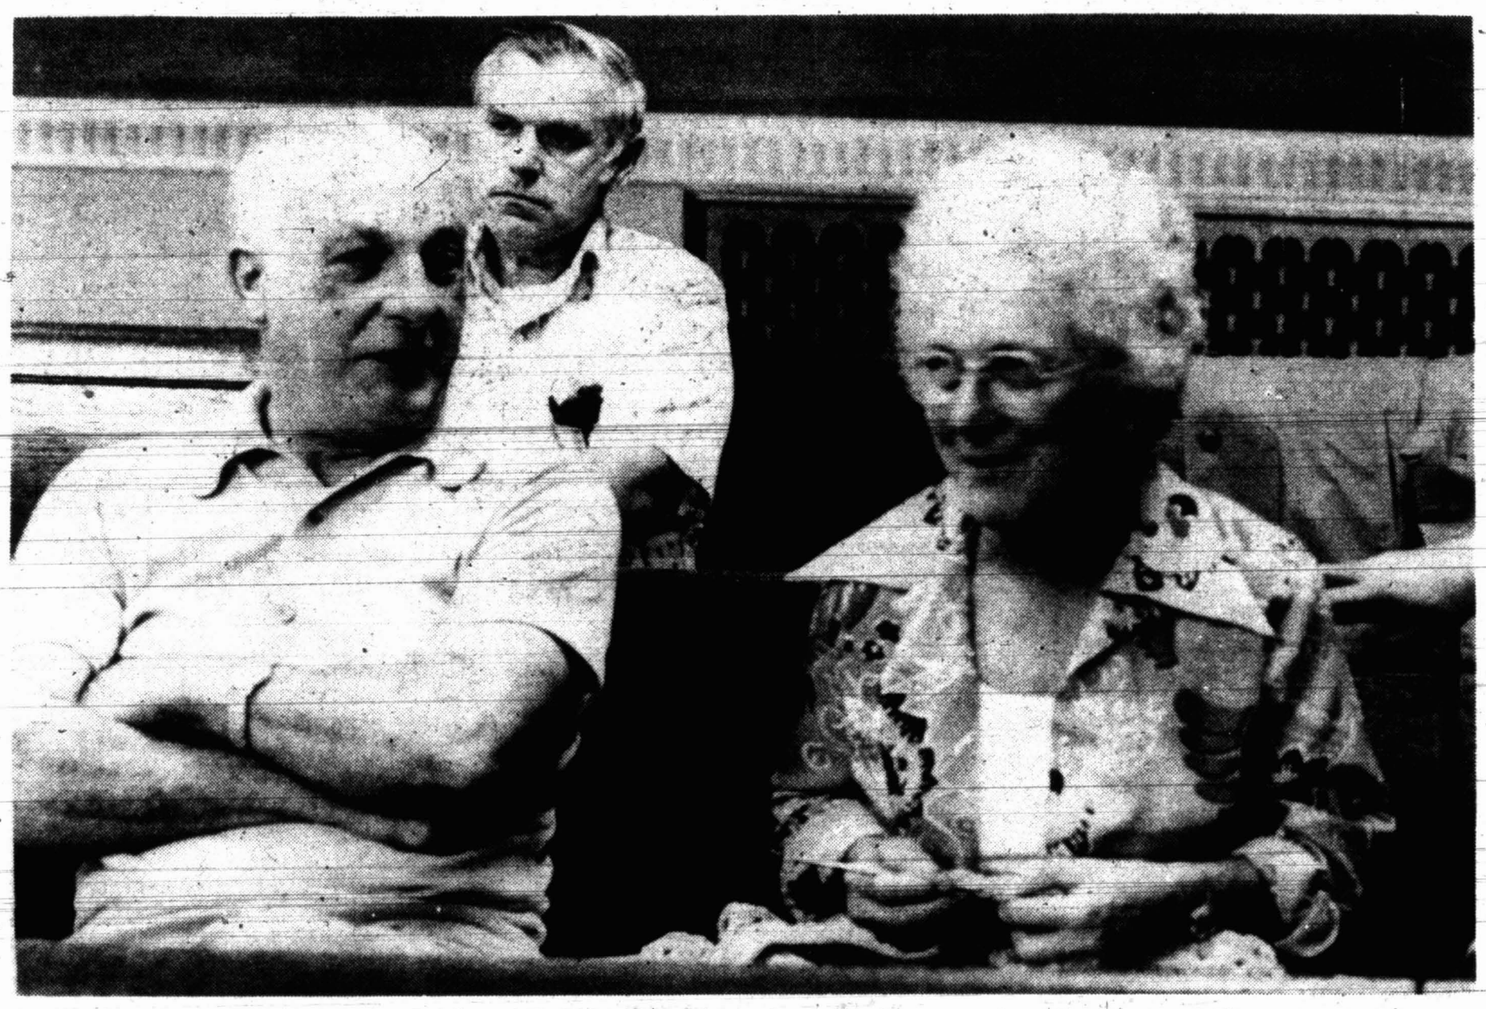
Peters suggested that the county require a developer to prepare a Specific Plan at the end of a four-year construction period if he wants to build more units.

DeMars replied: "You're warping the idea of the Specific Plan to order it after stages of a development are already completed. A Specific Plan does not guarantee any numbers. It can't be considered a contract."

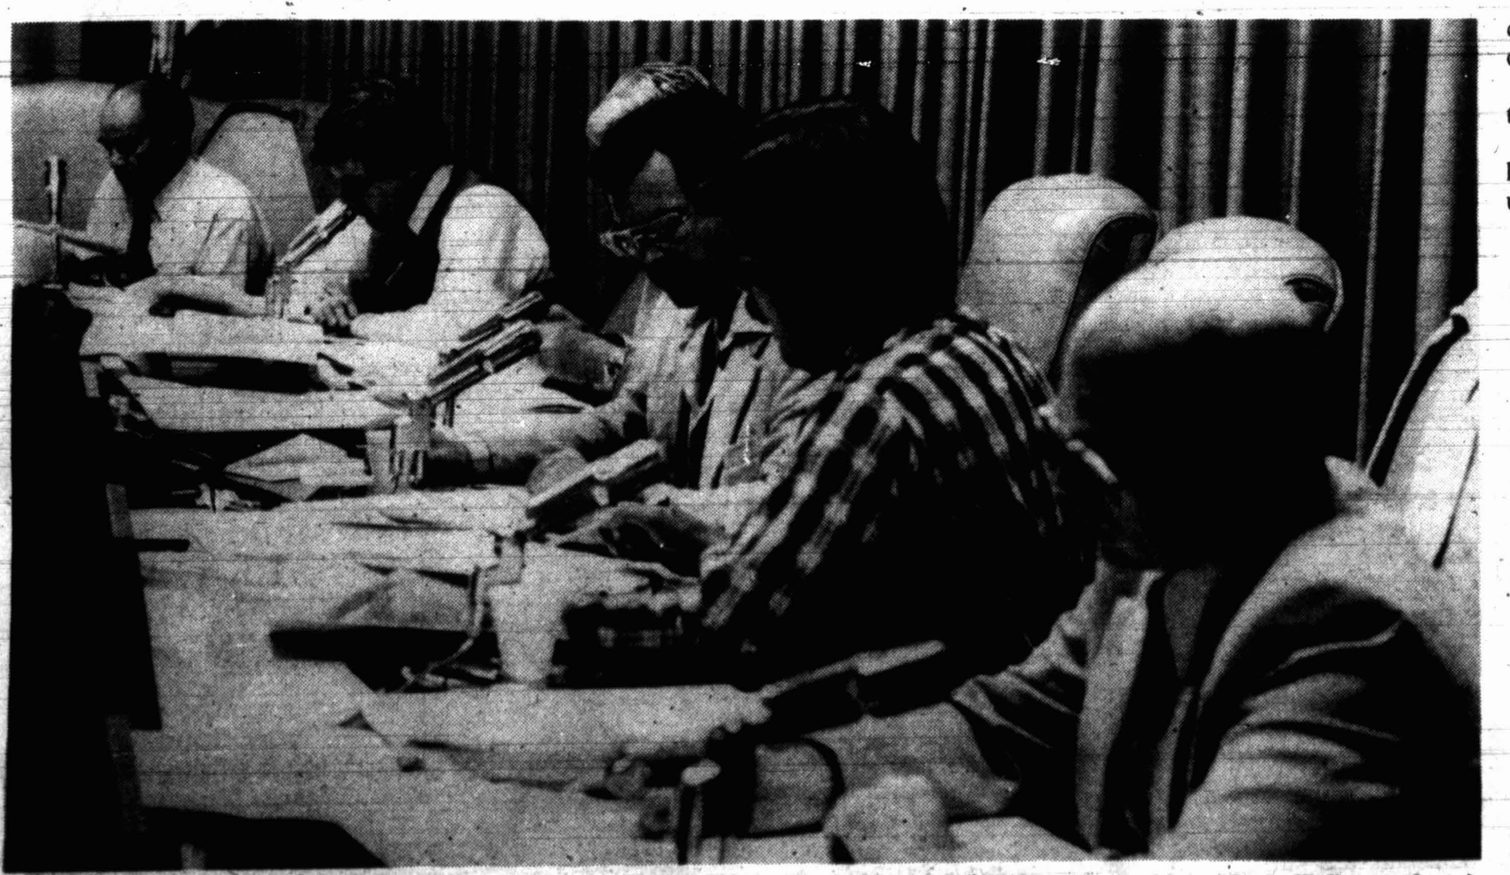
Peters conceded: "I guess I've been filibustered out of it."

"I'd hope you've been reasoned out of it," Sullivan said.

COMMISSIONERS Marc Del Piero and Bill Peters staunchly debate the issue of the Odello property. Del Pierro, of Salinas, said that it was in the interest of the owner and his heavily-taxed property to exclude it from the provision that it remain in permanent open space. Peters, of Carmel Valley, called Del Piero's motion "a disaster," arguing it was not in the best interest of the Master Plan. (Steve Hellman photo)



BRUNO AND BELLA ODELLO appear happy after the county planning commission decided that their 134 acres of agricultural land should be left open for commercial development. The Odellos farmed the land for 50 years, but sky-rocketing taxes in the last decade have forced them to consider building a hotel and condominiums on at least 20 acres.



THE MONTEREY COUNTY Planning Commission was deep in papers last week as it prepared its final recommendations on the revised Carmel Valley Master Plan. (Steve Hellman photo)

2 Carmel High students charged with cutting down oak tree

Two Carmel High School students charged with cutting down a landmark oak tree on the high school campus will have to dig up the roots of the tree as part of their restitution for the vandalism.

Robert Slaughter and Doug Pozzi, both 17 and members of the varsity football squad, were named by school officials last week as the vandals.

The tree, a century-oak oak that was a popular meeting place for students, was destroyed by a chain saw attack on Sept. 14.

There was no reason given for the act. According to high school vice principal Frank Lynch, "We heard a lot of stories, but none of them were acceptable."

The students were suspended for five days. They will be on probation for the remainder of the school year.

Lynch said that the two students would be allowed to stay on the football team. "We want to keep them on campus, but they're going to have to work," Lynch said.

Besides removing the trunk to make room for a new tree, Pozzi and Slaughter will each have to complete 100-200 hours of community work, Lynch said.

The Monterey County Sheriff's Office issues misdemeanor citations for "illegal forestry" to the students. This means that they will have to report to the juvenile probation department.

Lynch said, "If there's another violation, it will mean an involuntary transfer to another school."

He added that the students could be sent to continuation school "if they don't keep their act straight."

The Shadow Box, playwright Michael Christofer's award-winning tragi-comedy about the celebration of life through death, will be staged for opening performances by the MPC Players Thursday through Saturday, Nov. 1-3 at the Monterey Peninsula College, Monterey. Curtain is at 8:30 p.m. in the Standing Room Only Theatre.

A story about life, love, death, but most of all hope, The Shadow Box won the Tony Award as Best Play of 1976-77 and the Pulitzer Prize as the best drama in 1977. The play focuses on three terminal cancer patients living in cottages on the grounds of a hospital who must come to grips with their anxieties and the finality of their condition. The Boston Globe said The Shadow Box is "extraordinary ... startling and in its way, very, very funny."

Directed by Sid Cato, the MPC production stars Sheila Foulkes, Michael Lojkovic, James Brady and Andy Philpot.

Additional performances will be staged Thursday through Saturday, Nov. 8-10.

Tickets, at $1.50 general and $1 for students and military personnel, may be reserved by phoning the MPC box office at 375-0455, after 5 p.m. or purchased at the door on the night of the performance.

Performing arts need promotion for success

By RICHARD TYLER
Director, Sunset Community and Cultural Affairs

EVEN WITH AN educated public and performances readily available, the arts need promotion. In a country where public relations, publicity, advertising and other promotion skills have been elevated to near-sciences, the performing arts have made little effective use of these devices. Lack of funds has been one reason for this.

Not infrequently, however, performing arts organizations have seemed to feel that their mere existence would of itself attract an audience. In a competitive society this is not enough. Audience development can be substantialy helped by the services of good and experienced public relations counsel.

It is sometimes asked why the press carries radio and television program listings daily at no charge to the media while producers of concerts, dance recitals and plays must regularly buy space at considerable cost in order even to be mentioned. The answer seems to be that the former are regarded as a public service because there is a large public to be served; the latter, having negligible readership interest, are penalized by many newspapers. This inequity is remedied on the Peninsula at relatively small cost to newspapers and to the considerable benefit of the arts by the listing of events in certain sections of the paper on particular days.

Management concerned with the problem of audience development might well ascertain whether the most convenient means of ticket distribution and sales are being employed, whether special sales techniques—subscriptions, benefits, group sales for special performances—are being utilized satisfactorily.

In connection with group sales it may be asked whether performing arts organizations are really trying to reach organized audience groups that exist or could be developed. The creation of a propitious environment for the arts depends primarily upon the education of a people. Any significant increase in demand for the performing arts will derive only from a citizenry that has come to love them and to depend on them.

Furthermore, the pursuit of excellence in the arts without which their expansion is meaningless grows only from a general public recognition of what constitutes high quality. Mediocrity is the menace that lies inherent in egalitarianism. The only weapon that can be used to combat it is education; and again, not a mediocre education but one that produces an appreciation of form and a basic concern for the things of the mind and spirit.

OBVIOUSLY, THIS CANNOT be accomplished quickly. But if it is to be accomplished at all, there are steps to be taken now and in the years immediately ahead. The habit of attendance is based on a strong sense of need and without a sense of urgent necessity on the part of the people, the performing arts will always remain peripheral, exotic, and without any true significance. Therefore, the habit must be acquired young; it is probably not too soon to begin at 6 years of age. After all, at that age boys are learning to play baseball. Music and dance and play-acting come naturally to children at that age.

This can easily be translated into the pleasure of seeing and hearing others perform. The role of the family at this stage cannot be overemphasized. If parents are not interested in the arts, are not willing to offer youngsters at least an occasional opportunity to satisfy their curiosity about what goes on inside the theater or recital hall or opera house, then no formal effort at cultural education is likely to be very successful.

The family climate that reinforces the school's efforts to introduce the child to the pleasures of the performing arts is of inestimable underlying importance in enlarging the audiences of the future.

For the school to make sure that a child attends a concert, a play, or a dance recital once a year for 10 years will neither allow the child to acquire a habit nor create a sense of necessity about art. These pleasures will remain something to take or leave, and the chances are on the side of the latter. But to provide live performances for young people with sufficient frequency, quality and range to establish a lifelong habit is generally impossible within the context of American education at this present time.

Arts organizations and independent agencies are helping build greater appreciation among children of school age and might well be aided in expanding their work. They have done this with various methods and degrees of success. Observing what has been done in Europe, some have established children's matinees, other youth events, and special student ticket prices. As yet nothing has been created in this country to compare with the Children's Theater and Theaters for Young Spectators in the Soviet Union.

In the United States the pioneers in providing programs for youth have been the music organizations. The effective exposure of young people to the arts is as much a civic responsibility as programs in health and welfare.

THE ROLE OF THE CRITIC in maintaining standards, weeding out the second- and third-rate, and casting a spotlight of approval upon the best is important in building greater appreciation. Save in a handful of major cities, newspaper criticism of musical, theatrical and dance events is the responsibility of journalists with no specialized knowledge of the field. As artistic activity proliferates, there will be increasing need for the press to improve the quality of its critical comment. For smaller communities it might be feasible to have "circuit riding" critics serving several papers.

These past weeks I have written these articles with the conviction that the arts are one of the central elements of a good society, an essential of a full life for the many, not a luxury for the few. This conviction is shared by growing numbers of Americans with the result that the arts are being given a far larger mission than they have been commonly accorded in the past.

Few can take issue with the objective of making the arts available to everyone who wishes to enjoy them. But an important cautionary note must be added. We must never allow the central focus on quality to weaken or shift. Popularization in any realm often leads to a reduction of standards. In our efforts to broaden the audience base we must not be led to accept imitation as a substitute for creation, mediocrity as a stand-in for excellence.

Democratization carries with it a peril for the arts. There are no guarantees against the dilution of standards that often accompanies an expanding public but a constant critical awareness of the danger can do much to prevent its consequences. Promotion of good performances is the basis for strong development of a public which seeks out the play, the music, and the dance of theater.

The wine connoisseur

"Americans for Wine" is formed

By ROBERT LAWRENCE BALZER

IT IS APPROPRIATE that this hopeful message from John De Luca, president of the Wine Institute, concerning a newly formed citizens' organization called "Americans for Wine" should be dispatched from the Trianon Palace, the grande luxe hotel where Woodrow Wilson was the guest of Clemenceau for the signing of the Treaty of Versailles at the conclusion of World War I.

We are here with a group of 22 Americans who are indeed "for wine." Upon our return from Champagne, Alsace, Burgundy, Bordeaux and the Loire regions, we'll spend a weekend in Napa and Sonoma as vintage 1979 in California draws toward completion.

Despite rivalries in the marketplace, the world community of wine growers enjoys the mutually assisting cooperation one looks hopefully for in other economic and industrial endeavors. Like other industries, there are also problems, political involvement needing the understanding concern of the general public.

JOHN DE LUCA first annouced the creation of "Americans for Wine" at the Wine Media symposium in San Francisco this past summer. He was deeply concerned about some of the hypocritical moves of neo-prohibitionists to destroy the California wine industry, one of the state's leading agricultural industries and developments of cultural pride for the nation. With no further introduction, here is his letter, in full, addressed to you:

Dear Wine Enthusiast:

There are times when government loses touch with the desires of the average American and needs to be reminded about it. Americans with an appreciation for wine are very much aware of the perception gap that prevails in parts of the country and within the federal establishment. Certain officials are simply not in step with the cultural and social forces at work.

At the very moment wine is being perceived as the beverage of moderation and our industry as an active force for social responsibility, several campaigns are underway to broaden control over us. The thrust is not aimed primarily at wine. But given the laws of the land we are affected by bureaucratic encroachment in general as well as by Neo-Prohibitionist attacks on the alcohol beverage industries.

To objective observers, proposed controls, which include higher taxes, ingredient and warning labels, health scares, attacks on advertising, etc., are designed more to stigmatize the product itself than to curb abusive behavior which is, of course, a legitimate concern and issue. But the problem is expressing that opinion with a unified and effective voice.

That's where Americans for Wine comes in. It will be there to advance the well being of wine and to assure cohesive action. Building our strength and optimism for the future, this volunteer, grass-roots organization is intended to bring together people from all social and economic groups representing all segments of the wine community.

It will serve as a natural complement to existing wine appreciation groups that have done so much to make wine an integral part of American life. In the political and public arena its function will be to support positive programs and to defend our interests when under attack. Through communication and coordination it should be a constituency force that checks governmental excess and regulatory abuse.

The formation of Americans for Wine is a sign of growing strength and enthusiasm for wine in our country. I invite you to lend your individual vitality and commitment to this broad-based organization by joining today.

Sincerely, John De Luca.

SHOULD YOU BE moved to unite with John De Luca in support of our aesthetic farmers, wine growers of the land, which here in France are considered a national treasure, send for an application to: Americans for Wine, Temporary Administration c/o Wine Institute, 165 Post St., San Francisco, Calif. 94108.

The enrollment charge for this new organization being established solely for the well-being of wine in the land is a mere $1.

The application asks only for your name, occupation, membership in wine organizations, other wine interests, experience with contacting news media, and any experience in the world of politics. It is intended that the group of Americans for Wine will meet and determine its own activities no later than 1981.

The music corner:

An outstanding concert

By ALFRED R. RICE

THE CARMEL MUSIC SOCIETY presented the outstanding young Soviet pianist, Grigory Sokolov, Wednesday night.

Born in 1950, Sokolov began his training at the Leningrad Conservatory at the age of 7. He achieved high honors at the Tchaikovsky Competition in 1966 and, as a result, made several international tours. In spite of this success, Sokolov returned to the Leningrad Conservatory in 1968 where he finished a course of study under Professor Halfin in 1973. Since 1975 he has been an instructor at the conservatory.

The Carmel concert began with Sokolov trudging deliberately onto the stage of Sunset Center, briefly acknowledging the audience, and beginning the Beethoven Sonata No. 15 in D major, opus 28 ("Pastorale"). Perhaps this rather strange stage deportment is an indication of Sokolov's training at Leningrad, or his own peculiar manner of performance.

In any case, he produced a beautiful tone quality and very clear phrasing in the allegro first movement. Many of the melodies of this movement were drawn out in a very romantic manner with a good deal of emotion. A rather bouncy rhythm characterized the andante second movement. By the third movement scherzo, Sokolov became a little plodding and heavy in his rhythmic accentuation. He began the last movement very softly with a good effect and created great contrasts in dynamics.

At the conclusion of the sonata, Sokolov acknowledged the audience only once, very briefly and without emotion. Considering his own emotional playing his manner seemed a bit odd, but it otherwise did not detract from the performance.

During the Beethoven sonata and the following two Polonaises by Chopin, it was evident that Sokolov was having some difficulty ending his phrases cleanly with the sustaining pedal. This reviewer hopes that a member of the Carmel Music Society will investigate this problem with people in charge of the Steinway piano at Sunset Center. Last week, the pianist in the Haydn Trio, Vienna, had similar difficulties and produced a very loud "twang" because the dampers of the sustaining pedal did not close on the strings evenly. Certainly these pianists would have played better if their instrument was properly adjusted.

Sokolov's Chopin Polonaises contained some fine tonal coloring but on the whole were sloppy and a little boring. His attempts at musical romanticism sacrificed the much-needed element of direction in these works.

The second half of the program began with Prokofief's Sonata in one movement, No. 1 in F minor. This work was also played in a very romantic manner but did not appear substantial in musical content. It was entirely different and much less effective than the more well-known sonatas Nos. 7 and 8.

With the three Preludes of Rachmaninoff, Sokolov came unto his own and produced powerful, brooding works. His own temperament seemed to fit the content of this music quite well.

The final work of the evening, Stravinsky's Trois Movements de Petrouchka, was a delight for an orchestral musician to hear. Sokolov's crisp handling and feeling for this work made it the most successful on the program. Fine tone color changes were achieved in the first movement and one did not even miss the orchestral palette of tone colors too much.

After a good amount of applause Sokolov ended the concert with two short, unannounced encores, effectively played.

Friends of Photography releases Watkins book

Photographs of the Columbia River and Oregon by Carleton E. Watkins, a volume of 51 reproductions of landscape photographs by the pioneer 19th century photographer, has been published and released by The Friends of Photography and Weston Gallery of Carmel. Edited by James Alinder, executive director of The Friends, the publication contains introductory essays by Russ Anderson and David Featherstone.

In 1867, Carleton Watkins, a prominent San Francisco landscape photographer, carried his bulky glass plate camera through near-wilderness areas along the Columbia River and to the growing cities of Portland, Oswego and Oregon City. These photographs were published five years later in an album which is now extremely rare. According to The Friends, Watkins' photographs represent important historical document and provide insights into the history of photography.

Photographs of the Columbia River and Oregon includes all of the photographs found in the original volume and are published in the exact order. The 7x9¼-inch reproductions were printed with a three-color process using the laser scanner technology. The 136-page book is available in both cloth and paperbound editions for $29.50 and $16.50, respectively.

The Friends of Photography is a non-profit organization founded in 1967 to serve creative photography and increase public awareness of the medium through exhibitions, publications and workshops. The Friends has grown from a dozen people in Carmel to an interntional membership of several thousand. The headquarters and gallery of The Friends is located in Sunset Center, Carmel.

Black rolls 4-1. How should he play?

ANSWER TO BACKGAMMON PROBLEM

The next few problems will test how well you understand the principle of bearing off. Here we have a race to see who can first bear off his men. Black will be able to bear off a man with the 4, but White will be ahead because it will be his roll.

Normally when bearing off, it is advisable to leave as few points as possible open. If that principle applied here, Black should use his roll to bear off a man from the 5-point, leaving one man on each of four points in the Black home board. And if White had one more man to bear off, that would be the recommended move.

But, in this position, there are other factors to be taken into account. There is an excellent chance that White will be able to clear his home board in two rolls. Even if he should miss, there is no guarantee that Black will also not miss once. Therefore, Black should take his 4-1 in such a way as to give himself the best chance to clear his board with his next roll.

Since Black will have four men remaining, he will need a doublet if he is to bear them all off. If he plays as above, only 6-6 will allow him to clear his four men in one shot. The odds against rolling that are 35-to-1.

The alternative play is to use the 4 to bear off a man from the 4-point and to play the 1 by bringing the man from the 6-point to the 5-point. Stacking men on the 5-point would not be a good idea if Black were ahead in the race, and does not make for a good-looking home board. But in this position it more than doubles Black's chances of getting off in one roll!

Now Black can bear off all four men with either 6-6 or 5-5. The chances of rolling one of two doubles are 17-to-1—not much to hope for, but a distinct improvement on 35-to-1.

GAHAGANS CELEBRATE 40TH ANNIVERSARY

G. William Gahagan, former executive director of the Tor House Fondation, carefully planned the gala grand opening of Robinson Jeffers' Carmel Point home on Oct. 6 which included a reading of Medea by Dame Judith Anderson.

However, after months of organizing the day-long festivities he did not participate. In fact, he and his wife, Lorna, celebrated something more endearing—their 40th wedding anniversary.

They were married in Carmel Mission on Oct. 7, 1939 by Father O'Connell as Noel Sullivan played the organ. Paine Knickerbocker, a Dartmouth classmate of Gahagan's, was best man, Gahagan's sister, Agnes, of Goshen, N.Y., served as Lorna's attendant. Following the ceremony, the newlyweds drove to San Ysidro Ranch in Santa Barbara for their honeymoon.

To honor the happy event the four Gahagan children and their spouses converged on the Peninsula for a weekend of celebrations.

They are: Michael Gahagan of Santa Barbara; Tappy Hunt and her husband, Chip of Los Angeles; Lissa Nicolaus and her husband, Wendell, of San Francisco; and Mark Gahagan and his wife, Patricia of Berkeley.

The weekend was devoted to picnics at the beach, a family tennis tourney, a Mass at Carmel Mission and dinner at Andre's Restaurant.

LOCAL POETS EARN KUDOS

Carmel poets numbered among the winners of the annual Ina Coolbrith Circle poetry contest named at a banquet Oct. 6 in Berkeley, conducted in honor of National Poetry Day.

R.H. Linn placed second in the category for Serious Poetry in Traditional Form with the poem, For a Small Seed; and Linn's poem, Computerized Reconstruction of an Unstructured Robot earned honorable mention in the light or humorous verse class. Ronald Marek placed fourth in the Serious Poetry in Free Verse with the poem, Melinda Being a Daisy.

Historic Site for Sale

"If you should look for this place
after a handful of lifetimes,
Perhaps of my planted forest a few
May stand yet, dark leaved Australians or the coast cypress ..."

So wrote Robinson Jeffers, 50 years ago, about Tor House, the granite cottage he built with his own hands on the knoll at the western shore of Carmel Point. This lot was a part of Jeffers property then and, sure enough, cypress and eucalyptus planted by him still stand on it. * The lot adjoins Tor House, directly to the south. It has 94-foot frontage on Ocean View (just north of Stewart Way), runs back 96 feet on the south and 78 feet on the north (the Jeffers side) to a 55-foot leg on the ocean side. It's level, looks to the sea, and is part of a noble heritage. In today's terms, it's a prestigious (and practical) building site. In timeless terms, it's an intimate part of a great tradition. Jeffers would be stunned that it's now valued at $210,000.

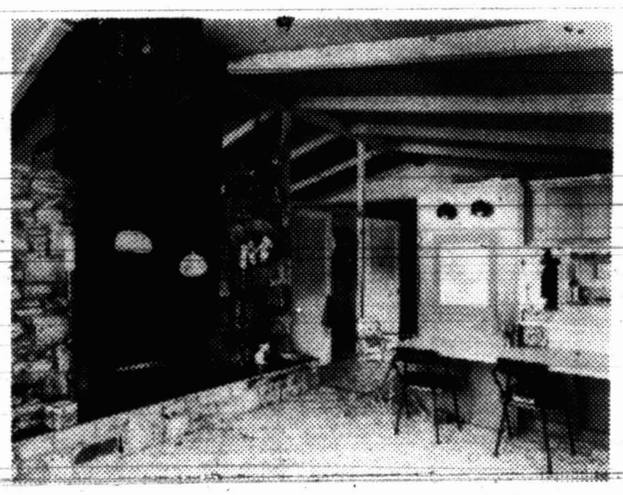
Unusual Carmel Home at Unusual Price

A decorative concrete block wall crosses this entire property, setting it apart from its quiet street and creating a pleasant patio. The whole front is glass, with the large living room looking out from the left, the equally large family room from the right.

Inside you'll find a stone wall, a bit more than head-high, dividing these two attractive rooms. At its center a warm fireplace opens both ways, and its black chimney breast rises to the beamed ceiling above.

Toward the rear of the family room, the bright and well organized kitchen opens across a convenient service bar. There's even a junior service counter, child-high, just below it. Floors are carpeted in the living room, vinyl-tiled in kitchen and family room for worry-free living.



A broad corridor opens behind these front areas and leads you back to 3 good sized bedrooms and 2 colorful baths. All the ceilings are beamed (the baths are firred down) and the rear gable end is glassed-in, like the front of the house. The master bedroom is 16 x 14, very light with abundant closets and totally private bath.

The lot is wedge-shaped: 115 feet across the front, 82 feet at the rear. A fenced play yard goes all around the house, an ideal setting for children. The location is east side of Highway 1, at 26110 Via Riviera. This is the last cul-de-sac off South Carmel Hills Road, a well protected spot, yet within easy reach of schools, shopping and all points on the Peninsula. Price is $128,500.

Carmel

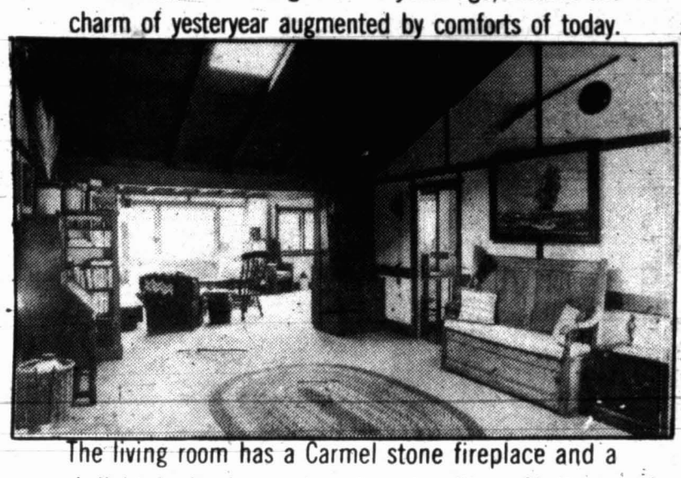
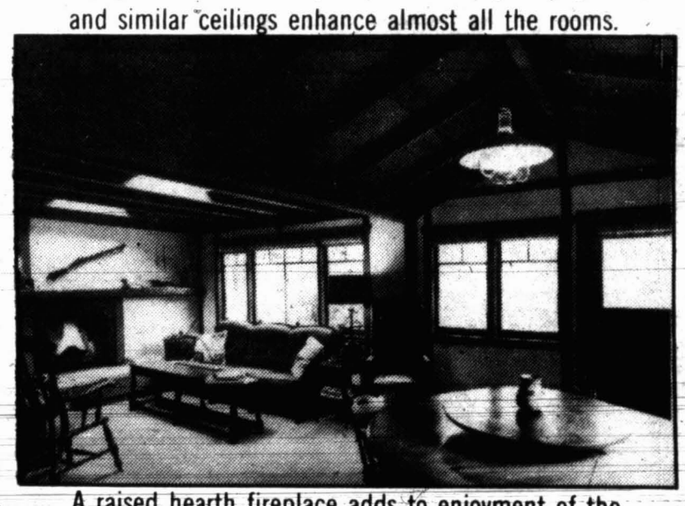
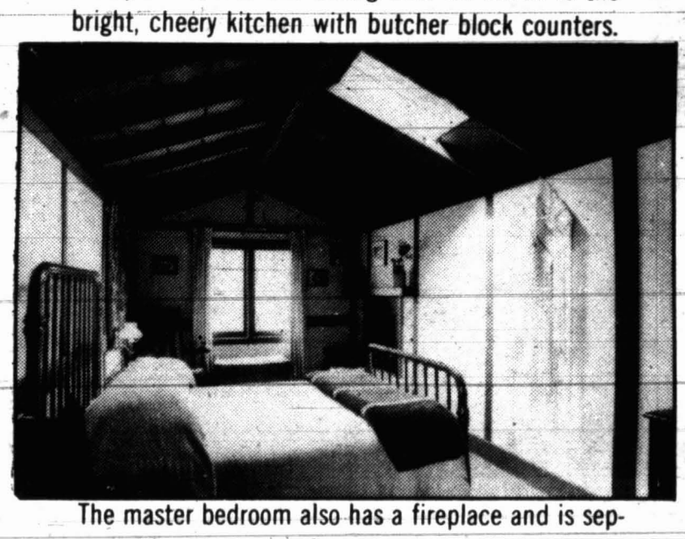
Tucked away on a woodsy street four blocks from the beach, this south-of-Ocean Avenue home, sensitively remodeled and enlarged three years ago, retains the charm of yesteryear augmented by comforts of today.



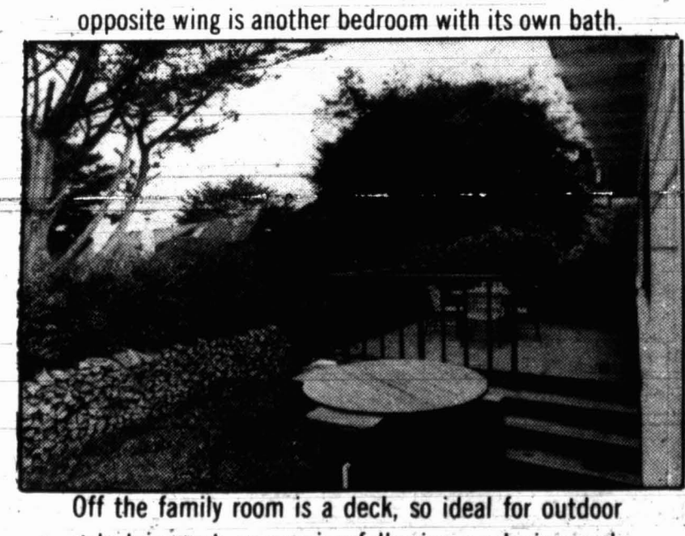
The living room has a Carmel stone fireplace and a skylight in its beamed, redwood ceiling. Skylights and similar ceilings enhance almost all the rooms.



A raised hearth fireplace adds to enjoyment of the family room, also the dining area off which is the bright, cheery kitchen with butcher block counters.



The master bedroom also has a fireplace and is separated by a bathroom from the study with bookcases and built-ins, and which could be a bedroom. In the opposite wing is another bedroom with its own bath.



Off the family room is a deck, so ideal for outdoor entertainment, or sunning following a relaxing soak in the adjacent, fully automatic hot tub. The price of this single story, redwood home with a handsomely carpeted interior, also secluded behind an ivy-covered picket fence, and so very fittingly called "Sanctuary" is $235,000. And there's a garage, too.
